NOTICE TO MARINERS.
NEWCASTLE HARBOUR.
LAYING OF GAS-PIPES, NEWCASTLE TO STOCKTON.

It is hereby notified for the information of Masters of vessels navigating the Port of Newcastle that the work of laying gas-pipes along the bed of the Harbour from Newcastle to Stockton will be commenced at an early date.
The pipes will be laid from the Newcastle side at a point 80 feet from the outer end of the Southern wavetrap, and will reach Stockton side approximately 300 feet to the North-eastward of the Western Green Beacon.
All persons are cautioned against letting go anchors or slacking away or lengthening hawsers until well clear of the above line, in order to avoid fouling or damaging the gas-pipes.
A large square sign-board, with instructions painted in white letters thereon will be erected on the South (Newcastle) side, and the line of the pipes will be indicated by two (2) discs three feet in diameter, erected on the North (Stockton) side, the front one just above high-water mark, and the other one about 100 feet back. Both discs will be painted red and white.

PLACE YOUR CONFIDENCE IN ONE OF PALING'S PIANOS.

We have been selling pianos for over 62 years, and this vast experience is freely at your disposal.
We can, with the utmost confidence, recommend to you our CHAPPEL, SAMES, ESTEY, and VICTOR PIANOS.
They are sold fully guaranteed, that is a great protection to you. We sell, also, on easy terms if desired. Catalogue post free on request. Call, or write, for one to-night.

THE "BURBERRY" RAINCOATS.

PROOF WITHOUT HEAT.

WARMTH WITHOUT WEIGHT.

The cold snap of the last few days turns one's thoughts to overcoats, and reminds us that it is wise to always have a light coat handy even in the Summer time as protection against the frequent showers.

The famous English "Burberry" Coats are in a class apart from all other productions.
In the fine quality of the materials, the distinctive cut, and the superior finish they embody CHARACTER which appeals to everyone.

You can carry a "Burberry" on days when other coats would be burdensome—you can wear it in the heaviest shower and remain quite dry.

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

She was silent a little while, so was Laronde. They were walking along the pavement crowded with people, all searching hurriedly for food and amusement. Miriam was feeling the contrast between the morning and the evening.

"I tell you it made me feel rotten," she continued under her breath. "I think that was why I let Sir John—father—turn me out so early and drive me back to the Blue Boar. I was afraid to meet Lady Boddington and—the girl who is to be my step-sister. For if they'd lived in that atmosphere all their lives, awoke every morning to the song of the birds and the smell of flowers, I expect they'd be sort of holy, too—and they'd find me out."

Laronde's fingers tightened on Miriam's arm. "Find you out!"

She nodded. "I'm not straight, Joe."

Laronde flung back his head and laughed heedless of the gaping crowd. "I'd like to find a woman who's straighter." He put his lips close to her ear. "Oh, my dear, don't you know how I love you!"

She stopped him with a look. They were standing in the middle of the Circus.

"I was sorry about the boy, too," she whispered.

Laronde nodded. He called a cab and put Miriam into it. She asked him where he was taking her, and he answered back to the Imperial. Amery was coming back to town and they would meet him there.

"I can't face Uncle Seth yet. Take me out to dinner first, Joe, just you and me. Before Seth starts talking and—and bullying, there's something I must say."

Laronde leaned out of the cab and spoke to the chauffeur, then sat back and put his arm around Miriam. "Something good, I hope?"

She looked at him affectionately, almost tenderly, but with the affection and tenderness of a sister or a mother. And there was pity in her eyes, too. He saw it, and he winced.

"I'm afraid you won't think it good," she said slowly. "You know I was never sure of myself, I always warned you I didn't know my own mind. After all that's happened to-day I do know it. Fond as I am of you, Joe, I can never, never marry you. And that's final."

Joe Laronde sat still a little while staring in front of him as if stunned.

"What's happened to-day that's made you know your own heart at last?" Miriam did not reply. "Something to do with young Boddington?"

Intuition, and the help that Miriam had wanted over the telephone, told him.

"Yes," she said slowly. "I suppose it is something to do with young Boddington."

No more was said between them until they were seated at a small table in a snug little restaurant discussing a very excellent dinner which Laronde had ordered.

Then they talked of ordinary things, laughing and chaffing like two ordinary mortals. They might have been quite commonplace people. They dallied over their coffee and cigarettes. Laronde pulled a rose from the vase in front of him and gave it to Miriam.

She put it in her dress with a little sigh. "Dear old Joe," she said.

He rose then with a curt: "We'd better go."

Outside the restaurant Miriam suddenly laid her hand on his arm. He had called a cab and was just waiting to help her into it.

"Before we drive back to the hotel, Joe, I want to go round to Duke-street, St. James's. I told you I lost a letter this afternoon. I must have dropped it there . . . in young Boddington's rooms."

Laronde gave the driver instructions. "I'd like to meet young Boddington," he said between his teeth.

"You needn't be jealous." Miriam laughed a little hysterically.

When the cab stopped she jumped out quickly and shut the door. "You wait there, Joe. It won't take me a minute to run up."

Running through the open doorway, she commenced to climb the staircase.

CHAPTER XXI.

Rachel Destine had locked the door of the sitting-room leading on to the landing; the bedroom door she left open, but every now and then she paused to listen. She was evidently in a great hurry, yet at the same time terrified of being discovered—or rather interrupted, for no one could come into either room with the door locked and the key in the keyhole.

Suddenly she realised the blind had not been drawn down on the bedroom window, and the curtains were wide apart.

With a frightened cry she dropped on to her knees behind the shelter of the bed. Then, creeping along the floor, she raised herself and peered over the edge of the dressing-table across the courtyard. She gave a great sigh of relief, for she saw that all the windows opposite were in darkness. No one had seen her.

Her secret was safe. Very cautiously she drew down the blind and fastened the curtains.

She gave a sigh of relief when she was ready, locked her dressing-case, and carried it into the sitting-room, switching out the lights after her. She unlocked the sitting-room door, turning the key very slowly so that no one should hear. Acting on a sudden inspiration she sat down at the bureau and scribbled a short note to George Boddington, which she put in an envelope and apparently forgot to seal.

Then turning out all the lights, she walked into the corridor, locking the door behind her. She ran quickly downstairs, and gave the porter the keys.

"I don't suppose you know when Mr. Boddington will return?"

The man glanced at her out of the corners of his eyes. She knew how to interpret that look; it meant that he was not coming back at all. That he had bolted.

"Well, miss, I can't say. I expect he's gone abroad for a bit of a holiday. It will be some time before we shall see him again."

Rachel nodded, and walked quickly away. She knew that the porter had not the faintest idea as to her identity. She hurried to Piccadilly Circus, and from there she took the omnibus to Paddington. She reached the station with ten minutes to spare before the last train left for Little Pennington Junction. She bought a first-class ticket, deposited her dressing-case in the cloakroom, saying she would not probably want it for a week, then, getting an evening paper, she walked up and down the platform until the train started.

To her surprise, she found a car from Crowhurst Hall waiting for her. She asked the chauffeur what had made them send him down to meet that particular train.

"It's the second I've met," he said, a little sulkily, she fancied. "Lady Bonnington was very annoyed that you hadn't come back in the Rolls-Royce with Sir John."

Rachel raised her eyebrows. "Oh, well, it doesn't matter, though I'm sorry. I shall be leaving soon."

"Oh, she wasn't angry with you," the chauffeur grinned. "Of course, you've never done anything wrong. It was Sir John's fault for not looking after you properly."

Rachel lay back and yawned. She did not want to talk, she wanted to think.

"Did you say you were leaving us?" the chauffeur asked, looking at her.

She nodded. "Yes, I'm afraid so."

He whistled. "What's that for?"

Rachel's red lips parted in a smile. A smile full of meaning, which the chauffeur found hard to interpret.

"Oh, I'm leaving to better myself," she said drowsily. It was the conventional remark that all servants make, but it seemed to satisfy the chauffeur.

• • • • •

Miriam Guryado knocked at the door of George Boddington's rooms, but received no answer. At last she went downstairs again and rang the porter's bell. A woman appeared from the basement.

"The porter's out, miss. Did you want to see any one?"

"Yes, I want to see Mr. George Boddington. I can't get any answer. I thought perhaps you could let me into his rooms so that I might write a letter to him."

The woman looked her up and down. "Well, I don't know, miss. Yes, I suppose I can."

Miriam followed her upstairs and waited while she unlocked the door of George's room. She entered and switched on the light. Miriam explained that when she had been there that afternoon Mr. Boddington had given her a letter just as she was leaving, which she had lost. She thought she might have dropped it going out.

The woman waited while she searched. Suddenly Miriam discovered a letter lying on the bureau. It was addressed to George, but it had not been sealed. She fingered it thoughtfully, glancing at the woman.

"Is that it, miss, do you think?"

"I don't know. How long did you say Mr. Boddington has been gone?"

The woman glanced at the clock. "Oh, quite a long time now, miss. I heard my husband say he had gone off with his bag—on a holiday."

Miriam slowly pulled the letter out from the envelope. She was sniffing the atmosphere thoughtfully; the scent of Turkish tobacco was heavy. Someone had been smoking in the room less than an hour ago.

A glance at the letter told her it could not be the one she sought; not the one George had crushed into her hand.

Curiosity, and an even stronger feeling for which she had no name, prompted her to read it.

"Dear Old Boy,—Sorry to have missed you. Just popped in for a moment. They say you've gone to the Continent for a holiday. You might have let me know. I hope there's nothing wrong.

"Yours ever, KITTY."

Unconsciously she crushed the letter up in her hand.

"Is that it?" the woman's voice said quietly.

"Yes, that's it, thanks."

There was a catch in her voice, almost like a sob. She crossed the room, pressed a shilling into the woman's hand, and hurried quickly downstairs, and jumped into the taxi-cab beside Joe Laronde:

"Tell him to drive quickly to the hotel, Joe," she whispered. "I'm—tired."

(To be continued.)

TRAMWAY DISMISSALS.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY.

Further evidence was taken by the select committee (Mr. Fingleton, chairman) at Parliament House yesterday afternoon in respect to the dismissal of certain tramway men who were charged with being in an alleged gaming-house at Redfern in October, 1912.

Constable James, cross-examined by Mr A. C. Warton, secretary of the Tramway Employees' Union, said a couple of shillings would, in witness's opinion, have bought up the whole stock in the shop. He had never seen a customer in the shop, and he did not know how the woman who kept it existed.

William Moffatt, bootmaker, 136 Oxford-street, Paddington, stated, in reply to Mr. Warton, that he knew Thomas O'Brien, who had been charged with gambling. He saw him at the corner of Cleveland and Crown streets between 8.45 and 9 p.m. on the night of the raid.

The chairman said the raid took place at about 9 p.m. in Cleveland-street, and that O'Brien had been found in the back yard of the premises. The time which had elapsed would not have permitted of his taking part in any gambling.

The committee adjourned till Tuesday next at 2.15 p.m.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

LATE MR. P. PROCTOR.

Probate has been granted of the will of the late Mr. Peter Proctor, of North Sydney, retired journalist, who died on September 16 last. The testator appointed his son, Richard, and his sons-in-law, the Rev. N. J. Cocks (pastor of Pitt-street Congregational Church) and William Herbert Pratt, accountant, of Sydney, executors and trustees of his estate. He directed his trustees to devote £500 to the purchase of an annuity for his brother, Richard Proctor, of West Maitland, and to pay the income of the residue of the estate to his (testator's) widow, Margaret Proctor, during her life; after her death the estate to be realised and divided in equal shares among his children.

The net value of the estate was estimated at £17,020 11s 5d, of which £14,375 represented shares in public companies.

LATE MR. L. HARGRAVE.

The late Mr. Lawrence Hargrave, of Woollahra Point, Rose Bay, who died at Lister private hospital, Darlinghurst, on July 6 last, appointed the Perpetual Trustee Company, Limited, executors and trustees of his estate, to whom probate of his will has been granted. The deceased directed his trustees to pay the income arising from his estate to his widow, Margaret Preston Hargrave, during her life; after her decease, and until the death of his last surviving child, the income was to be divided equally among his children, and the issue of any deceased children. On the death of his last surviving child the estate was to be realised, and the proceeds divided among his grandchildren in equal shares.

The net value of the estate was sworn at £20,448 17s 8d.

LATE MISS A. E. SMITH.

Probate has been granted of the will of the late Miss Alice Elizabeth Smith, of Darlinghurst, who died at Kirkton private hospital, Darlinghurst, on August 3 last. The testatrix appointed Mr. Norman Hector Murray, of the firm of Messrs. M'Lachlan and Murray, solicitors, of Sydney, executor and trustee of her estate. She bequeathed £3000 to Henry Bertram Rygate, grazier, of Kaludabah, Glen Innes; £500 each to Dr. C. B. Blackburn, of Macquarie-street, Sydney, Dr. Herbert Marks, of Trelawney-street, Woollahra; and Dr. Reginald Jewsbury, of London, England; and £250 each to Sisters Ward and Tewesley, of Kirkton private hospital, Miss Caroline Martin, of Colo Vale, Inez Ivey, of Darling Point; and A. J. M'Lachlan and N. H. Murray (Messrs. M'Lachlan and Murray). The residue of the estate she devised to her brother, John Wallace Smith, and her sisters, Mrs. Ruth Cavendish, of London; and Mrs. Mary Josephine Dunlop, of Sydney, in equal shares.

The net value of the estate was estimated at £14,639 8s 6d.

LATE MRS. ANNA WILSON.

NEW SOUTH WALES ESTATE VALUED AT £39,993.

A re-seal of the probate granted by the Probate Court of Victoria in respect of the will of the late Mrs. Anna Wilson, widow, of Carlisle Lodge, Eastbourne, England, and formerly of Toorak, Victoria, who died in England on May 31 last, has been granted by the New South Wales Registrar of Probates. The testatrix appointed her son-in-law, Admiral Walter Bogue Bridges, R.N., of Trawalla, Victoria; her daughter, Mary Louisa Wilson, of Eastbourne, England; and Sir Samuel M'Caughey, M.L.C., of North Yanco, New South Wales (who renounced probate), executors and trustees of her estate. With the exception of £100 each to the Melbourne Hospital, and the Convalescent Home for Women, Victoria, the estate was divided among the family.

The net value of the New South Wales portion of the estate was sworn at £39,993 2s 1d, of which £35,000 represented mortgages.

LATE MR. N. ROGERS.

Probate has been granted of the will of the late Mr. Norman Rogers, merchant, of the firm of Charles Rogers and Co., of Goulburn, who died on August 31 last. The deceased appointed his widow, Olive Rogers, and his brothers, George Albert and Russell Aubrey Rogers, executrix, executors, and trustees of his estate. The estate was divided amongst his widow and family. The net value of the estate was sworn at £15,142 15s 7d.

ALLIES' DAY.

In connection with the movement to raise £150,000 for the mitigation of the distress among the Allied nations, it is stated that the main features of the city celebration—the carnival in Martin place and the queen of the day election—have aroused great interest. From the country districts a most gratifying response has been received to the invitation to organise, and letters have been received from all centres of the State congratulating the committee upon their action in initiating the day, and promising wide support. Throughout the suburbs generous sympathy has been accorded, and in a number of cases distinct candidates are being nominated for the queen of the day competition. Some excellent gifts have already been given to the fund, prominent among which may be mentioned the racehorse Meritus, and an around-the-islands tour kindly given by Burns, Philp, and Co. This tour will be the prize in a guessing competition.

ALL FOR HOSPITALS.

The acting secretary of the Sydney Hospital received on Tuesday, from a soldier at the front, the following note:—"I enclose you my will for safe custody. It will explain itself. I am at present taking part in a most epoch-marking event, and should I not survive the ordeal of battle, my demise can be proved by reference to the Commonwealth military authorities. My regimental number is —, and my regiment is —."

Enclosed with the note is the will duly signed and attested by two witnesses.

SQUALLY AND COLD.

Rain squalls occurred on the central coast yesterday afternoon, and gales prevailed at other parts of the coast. At 8 o'clock last night rain squalls were reported from Seal Rocks, but conditions were fine between Newcastle and South Head. On the South Coast it was cloudy to overcast, with a tendency to showers. Newcastle reported two points and Gabo three points of rain yesterday.

The Minister promised considera-"tion, but pointed out the advantages "derived from the 10 per cent. increase on "the goods."—Sydney "Sun," 29th Sep-"tember, 1915."

But what of the Consumer? Note these facts.

Goodyear Fortified Tyres have five great features which no other tyre employs. These combat loose treads, punctures, and skidding in matchless and efficient ways.

Our anti-skid tread—the Goodyear All-weather—is double thick and tough. We add an extra tread instead of roughing our regular. And that on our output of All-weathers this year will cost us £200,000.

We are saving tyre users many thousands of pounds by building tyres in this way. We are winning new users faster than ever before.

The Goodyear is the only tyre made with the Rivet-Fabric Breaker Strip, where the rubber of the tread is riveted through a strip on the body of the tyre.

THE RIVET-FABRIC BREAKER STRIP FORTIFIES THE MOTORIST AGAINST TREAD SEPARATION.

The Goodyear is the only tyre made on the "Air-Bag" cure—a method which adds £90,000 per annum to our factory cost. By this process the tyre is finally cured in the same shape as it receives in actual use. THE "ON-AIR" BAG CURE FORTIFIES THE MOTORIST AGAINST 50 PER CENT. OF THE BLOW-OUTS DUE TO WRINKLES IN THE INNER FABRIC, AND MAKES FOR GREATER MOTORING COMFORT.

£1090 per day spent to fortify Goodyear Tyres.

The other day we cited our experts to certain well-known tyres, and we asked what could Goodyear save by building tyres like these?

The answer was—based on current production, our saving would be £327,000 per year. That means £1,090 per day.

When we spend such sums to build tyres better than rivals, don't you think it worth while to get Goodyears?

What research means.

We have a special factory given up to research alone, in the study of chemisty, composition, and every possible item that is any way connected with tyre production.

We have kept scores of experts working for years to attain lowest cost per mile. Their efforts have cost us £20,000 per year.

They have built thousands of tyres in thousands of ways to compare in metered road tests. Now they all agree that Goodyear Tyres mark the present-day limit in this respect.

The real supremacy test.

The Packard, The New Locomobile, and the Franklin are three of the highest-priced and most exclusive cars of America. All use Goodyears as STANDARD equipment. A Packard official drove a car from Detroit to Indianapolis equipped with Goodyear Tyres, then for 1000 miles around that speedway at 65 miles an hour. The usual limit of tyre life in racing is about 500 miles. The treads wore off, but the Goodyear Tyres, without a blow-out took the car back to Detroit.

And again—

The Franklin Company, on May 1st, ran fuel economy tests in 137 cities. The three cars making the highest score were equipped with Goodyear Tyres. One made a world's record—55 miles on a gallon of spirit. One made 53 miles, and one 51.8 miles.

Of the 15 cars making 40 miles or better, 10 had the Goodyear equipment.

These are tests for endurance, for power, economy, and for resiliency. And Goodyear won each class. Not our tests, remember, but tests made by car-makers whose prestige is at stake on their judgment.

You who seek "Quality" Tyres,

Sturdy, Safe, Enduring Tyres—need Goodyear Tyres. No other tyre offers such inducements; no other tyre commands such sale, such respect.

Your troubles are the troubles we best have met. Your wants we have best supplied. It is not the "Quantity" of Goodyear Tyres that is stirring comment—it is the "Quality"—and that Quality we can and shall maintain.

RELIGIOUS LITERATURE.

ANGLO-CATHOLICISM.

While few of us can resist the temptation to buy and read all kinds of books about German politics and German "kultur," it may, on the other hand, be some relief to get away from that asphyxiating atmosphere, even though it be to escape into the ecclesiastical atmosphere of one of the most interesting periods of English Church history. And in this instance we are under the guidance, and a very capable guidance it is, of a Frenchman. Dr. Paul Thureau-Dangin makes some apology for his temerity in venturing to write the history of the Catholic revival in England, which began with the Oxford movement, but the apology is quite unnecessary. Something may be due to the translator and editor, but the author of these two portly volumes has taken pains to know the facts, to understand the spirit of the movement, and to weigh its significance. We have not anywhere noticed any important misapprehension due to the work of a foreigner, though here and there the author expresses his amazement at the illogicality of the English mind and its inveterate love of compromise, and the impossibility of presaging what turn it may take at critical moments. Yet it is wonderful how he makes his way through the painful process which meant so much for good or ill to the Church of England, and through her to the spiritual life of the nation.

The author of this history covers the whole ground from the first signs of change at Oxford up to the year 1906. It might seem as if a history of the Oxford movement written by a Frenchman who is a loyal son of the Roman Catholic Church would be vitiated on that very ground, but there is an interest in seeing how a Roman Catholic who does not attempt to conceal his Romanism, while striving to attain a judicious outlook, speaks of the men and the movement which influenced English religious life. The history is frankly written from the Roman point of view, but we have yet to learn of any record of the Oxford movement which is not deeply coloured by the prejudices and sympathies of the writer. The first volume opens with a sketch of English religious life preceding the "revival." Naturally the author lays his finger upon the dark spots of the Protestantism then dominating the whole of the Church of England. Protestantism is to him a negation of religion, a humanly concocted refuge for men who had forsaken the only divine home of the soul. As he judges Protestantism not by what it affirms, but by its denial of purely Roman rites and doctrines, the verdict is inevitable. Just when Protestantism "seemed to have obtained a definite victory in the Established Church, suddenly the wind began to veer, and the tide to turn towards Catholicism." Previously the English Churchman gloried in being Protestant, though "it is true that he believed himself to be in possession of a special brand of Protestantism, which, like all English commodities, was superior to articles of the same name in use on the Continent." "To-day," he says, "the Anglican will indignantly repudiate the term Protestant, and claim the right to be called Catholic." It is true that he speaks of himself as "Anglo-Catholic," a term for which the author has a curious contempt in view of the fact that many official documents of his own Church speak of "Roman Catholic." He rejoices, however, in the changed aspect of many Churches in England, where we now find "the raised altar of stone or marble, richly ornamented, decorated with flowers and candles, surmounted by a cross (and often by a crucifix)." There are "altars dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, St. Joseph, or the Sacred Heart . . . special places are marked off for the hearing of confessions, and sometimes, by the door, a stoup of holy water is seen. . . . Mass, no longer a forbidden word, has become the principal act of worship. . . . the prayers, vestments, and actions of the celebrant are copied almost entirely from our liturgy, and we might think ourselves in a Catholic Church but for hearing the prayers said in English." The author recognises that "these changes in the outer ceremonial are only the result of more important doctrinal changes . . . prayers for the dead are quite customary, and notices of requiem mass are often seen. . . . Even the Apostolic Succession is now claimed as the source and fountain head of episcopal and sacerdotal power." Dr. Thureau-Dangin confidently asks, "can anyone deny that this new form of Anglicanism is vastly different from that of the early days of the nineteenth century, and is much more nearly akin to catholicism?" All this is undoubtedly true, but it is true of only a section of the Anglican Church, and in its extreme form of a very small section, though the change has more or less affected the whole Church of England. It would be a mistake, however, to assume that the change to a more dignified form of worship and a more elaborate ritual necessarily implies going over to Romanism. All that is Roman is not catholic, and all that is catholic is not Roman. The two terms do not equate, and the Anglo-catholic may have his eyes fixed elsewhere than on Rome, though he may pass to the "elsewhere" via Rome, and sometimes gets no further. The author himself, who is too highly gifted with the historical spirit to shut his eyes to facts on the other side, recognises that the picture he has drawn "affects one section of Anglicans only," and says that "it is difficult to determine in what proportion the Anglican Church is divided, as to the partisans and opponents of these changes," yet he claims that even if "the so-called Anglo-catholics are only a minority, nevertheless they form the most active, fervent, and progressive party in the Anglican Church." But again it must be pointed out that Anglo-catholicism is not necessarily Roman-catholicism, and there are many inside and outside of the Anglican Church who object to any hyphenated Catholicism, and whose Catholicism is a protest against both the Roman and the pseudo-Anglican type.

He undoubtedly hits the Anglican Church hard in his repeated criticism of subjection in spiritual things to the Privy Council, and "the evils of an organisation which gave to secular tribunals power to regulate the dogma and discipline of the Church," which make "the collection of Privy Council judgments on ecclesiastical matters as though they constituted a supplement to the creed and canons of the Church."

A great part of these volumes is necessarily taken up with the names of Newman and Manning, and the author does not conceal his view that the Roman Catholic Church, having gained Newman, hardly knew what to do with him, though he is inclined to blame Manning for much of the neglect and opposition which Newman felt so keenly but bore so submissively.

To all interested in this chapter of English Church history these two volumes will be most welcome. They have been carefully compiled, and rather gain in value from the point of view from which they are written, and it may with truth be said that they cover the whole ground better than any book on the same subject from an English writer.

AUSTRALIA'S TESTING.

This is the title given to a booklet of six sermons on the war by Rev. W. Borland, B.D., the minister of Scots Church, Melbourne. The sermons are for inspiration and for comfort, and the comfort comes in the inspiration of a great and good cause. They are strong-souled words that Mr. Borland speaks, and throughout he keeps his theme up to a high level. The patriotic note is unfaltering, but the dominant note is that of the preacher of righteousness.

PRAYERS FOR THE DEAD.

Dr. Griffith Thomas, of Oxford, has no doubt that prayers for the dead are unsanctioned by scripture, and contrary to the Prayer book. In this "leaflet" of 15 pages he states simply and clearly the grounds of his opinion.

"The English Catholic Revival in the Nineteenth Century," by Paul Thureau-Dangin, 2 vols. (Simpkin Marshall, Hamilton, Kent and Co., London, Angus and Robertson, Sydney).
"Australia's Testing," by Rev. W. Borland, B.D. (Angus and Robertson, Sydney).
"Prayers for the Dead," by Rev. W. H. Griffith Thomas, D.D. (Angus and Robertson, Sydney).

What makes you well isn't the pill itself. It's the pill's action on your liver, and all the organs of digestion and elimination. Violent pills can't. Cockle's Pills will.—Advt.

NATIONAL EFFICIENCY.

GREATER ECONOMY URGED.

USELESS EXPENDITURE ON RECREATION.

The necessity for national economy and efficiency was emphasised again yesterday by the speakers in the campaign, which has taken the form of a series of luncheon-hour addresses in Martin-place.

Mr. F. E. Pulsford, reading an address by his father, ex-Senator Pulsford, who was to have spoken, but was too ill to attend, said that Australians were waking up to the fact that both as individuals and as a community they had been leading very careless lives.

Ease and efficiency did not go well together, proceeded Mr. Pulsford. Up to quite recently Australia lived a very sheltered existence, and the majority of her sons had grown up with very little knowledge of the dangers that beset national life. It was not at all to be wondered at now when the old world was rocking in the convulsions of a terrific struggle that crowds of our young men were found who failed to grasp the gravity of it all. Bred and born in a pleasant and peaceful land, where grim war had never raged, it was not to be expected that the crisis should find the same proportion of our youths ready for the fray as in the old land near the danger zone, and so accustomed to war, and to preparations for war. Here, where we were less awake to the danger, the trumpet call should have been louder and clearer than where they were more awake to the danger. But, strange to say, the reverse was the case. There, with lightning-like speed, party quarrels and ordinary public affairs were swept aside, and the war became the one supreme occupation. Here we just went on as we were, and simply added the war to our other public troubles. It was only as time passed that the matter of the war had, by its own weight, come more to the front, but even to-day it was far from occupying the supreme position that it occupied in England. He said this in justice to the manhood of Australia, for he was certain that much of the apparent slackness in the response to the Empire's need was to be traced to the comparative silence, and the slow methods of those in authority.

Dr. Arthur, M.L.A., made an attack upon what he classed as useless expenditure. He instanced the consumption of beer. Was that doing anything to beat the Germans? he asked. He also deplored the enormous expenditure upon tobacco. He would like to see some economy, so far as tobacco was concerned, so that the money could be used for war purposes. The same argument could be applied to jewellery and clothes. A man should be proud to go about shabby if he had put the money saved towards the purpose of war.

"The extravagant expenditure upon recreations at the present time is simply a scandal," went on Dr. Arthur. "I don't object to recreations which mean physical well-being, but to reckless expenditure upon recreations such as horseracing, professional boxing, and theatres. During the week we have had thousands and thousands of pounds spent at Randwick. If this useless expenditure continues, it is the proper thing for the Government to step in and do something."

It was not right for the people who remained behind to think that they had no part in this war, continued Dr. Arthur. They should realise that they had got to do their part, and that it was their business to find money for carrying on the war to a successful issue. They had to see that the soldiers were recompensed for the sacrifices they had made. They could find the money in two ways—by working harder and producing more or by saving so that they could pay taxes and lend money to the Commonwealth Government to finance the war. If every person in Australia saved a penny a day that would mean seven and a half million pounds in a year—sufficient to pay the interest on the war loans. The common-sense way to save was to cut down expenditure upon luxuries.

The campaign will be continued to-day, when the principal subject will be the drink question. Mr. Walter Bentley will recite a poem in keeping with the subject.

LATE MR. ALBERT MILLER.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The late Mr. Albert Miller, who died at Toorak (Victoria) on May 27, left real estate valued at £23,300, and personal property valued at £146,150, to his widow and children.

DEACONESSES' INSTITUTE.

Lady Helen Munro Ferguson, who presided at the annual meeting of the C. of E. Deaconesses Institution on Wednesday, said she could speak without diffidence of the value of the work done. The parochial work done by the deaconesses was of inestimable value. There was endless scope for ladies whose special training fitted them to undertake spiritual and practical work in the poorer parishes, for they illustrated the texts they preached by the beauty of their lives. And order of bush deaconesses, said Lady Helen, might overcome the difficulty which confronted the isolated families in outback regions of Australia.

The balance-sheet to July 31 disclosed a balance in bank of £105 10s 10d. The Children's Home and the Home of Peace also showed substantial credit balances.

The Archbishop, Dr. Wright, in moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, referred to the necessity for the erection of a new Deaconesses' House.

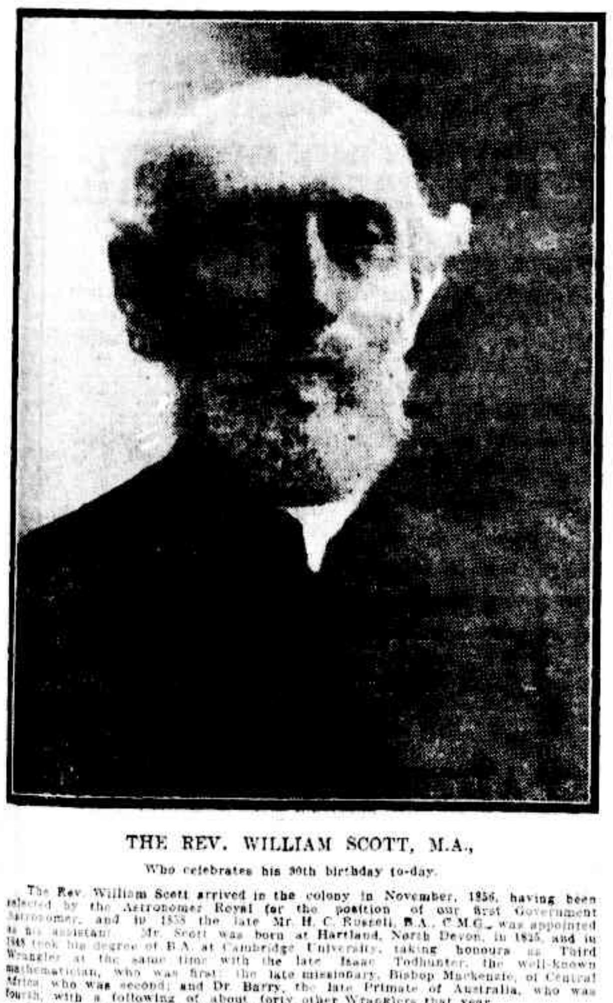
OUR FIRST ASTRONOMER.



THE REV. WILLIAM SCOTT, M.A.,

Who celebrates his 90th birthday to-day.

The Rev. William Scott arrived in the colony in November, 1856, having been selected by the Astronomer Royal for the position of our first Government Astronomer, and in 1858 the late Mr. H. C. Russell, B.A., C.M.G., was appointed as his assistant. Mr. Scott was born at Hartland, North Devon, in 1825, and in 1848 took his degree of B.A. at Cambridge University, taking honours as Third Wrangler at the same time with the late Isaac Todhunter, the well-known mathematician, who was first; the late missionary, Bishop Mackenzie, of Central Africa, who was second; and Dr. Barry, the late Primate of Australia, who was fourth, with a following of about forty other Wranglers that year.

Early in 1862 Mr. Scott, for health reasons, sent in his resignation as Astronomer, and shortly after took over the old Cook's River collegiate school from the Rev. W. H. Savigny, and in 1865 he was appointed warden of St. Paul's College within the Sydney University. He was hon. secretary of the Royal Society of New South Wales from 1867 to 1874, and treasurer for several years. In 1878 Mr. Scott resigned the wardenship of St. Paul's, and entered into parish work in the Goulburn diocese, where he successively held the incumbencies of Gunning, Bungendore, and Queanbeyan, and was appointed a canon of St. Saviour's Cathedral and examining chaplain for the Bishop.

After resigning his parochial duties, Mr. Scott revisited England with his wife, who died 16 years ago, and then went into permanent residence on his orchard property at Kurrajong Heights, which he had purchased in 1860. He continued to reside there up to last year, but during the winter months resided with one of his married daughters at Chatswood. He continues to enjoy good health.

Mr. Scott's elder son, William, recently retired from the Bank of New South Wales, having managed various branches for 34 years, and resides at Mosman. His second son, Julius, died some years ago at Bungendore, where he was incumbent. One daughter, Mrs. Robert Bell, lives at Chatswood; and his younger daughter, Mrs. Arnold Harpin, lives at his Kurrajong Heights property with her husband, who manages it. There are several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Three of Mr. Scott's late brothers were very early colonists of South Australia, two (Abraham and Henry) having been for many years members of the Legislative Council. The latter was Mayor of Adelaide by popular vote.

BELGIAN REFUGEES.

HELPING THEM IN HOLLAND.

We have received from the General Committee for Belgium Refugees at Missingen, in Holland (which has for its motto, "consolation in need"), a letter giving some idea of the work they are doing to help the Belgian refugees, and appealing for funds. The letter opens thus:—"Australia, being one of the countries which realise the sufferings of the Belgians, who, being homeless, have been here since the fall of Antwerp in October, 1914, we kindly ask you to publish some details in your newspaper."

Everything, apparently, is done free of cost to the refugees. One of the most important branches of the work is the providing of lodging for refugees on their way to England. The committee possesses about 40,000 addresses of refugees, and in this way has brought together hundreds of families. It also undertakes to trace missing soldiers. Up to the time of writing the committee had distributed over 30,000 articles of clothing to refugees, and 30 Belgian women and girls had been secured to work in a sewing school, where large quantities of clothing are turned out every week. Refugees who are unable to continue their voyage to England through lack of money can apply to the committee, which, upon satisfactory investigation, gives the necessary aid. Owing to the difficult circumstances in which many refugees may find themselves, the committee has founded a section for legal consultations. Any refugee can apply to the offices of two lawyers, and obtain advice free of charge. Apparently almost all the retailers in Flushing give a good reduction to refugees, and these retailers are made known by means of printed cards displayed in their windows.

Gifts of any kind are welcomed by the society.

ROAD TO CONSTANTINOPLE.

The following extraordinarily outspoken article by Theodore Wolff appears in the "Berliner Tageblatt":—

"The obtaining and securing of a road of communication to Constantinople is for us during the war, as well as in the future peace, so much a necessity that everything must be set upon the attainment of this object. In this place the standpoint has always been maintained that we can do very well without Roumania, and that co-operation with friendly Bulgaria for restoring a free road is more necessary. The truth has now been understood also by diplomatists of the Entente; but, fortunately, a little late. Will it now be recognised in Bulgaria that the situation is closely approaching its crisis while D. is still negotiating with Turkey as to the most favourable alteration of the frontiers? The Balkan States have been urged for months not to let the right moment go by, and, perhaps, they have become a little apathetic about such warnings. But this time the moment is really approaching. Somehow or other, on some road or other, right or to the left, with Peter or with Paul, a connection with the Turkish Empire must be obtained, which will secure for us a new possibility for both military and peaceable deeds. In this is certain profit for all who join our side. German activity in this direction will find the long-promised and natural realisation of its success in world-politics."

PROFIT SHARING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—There can be no doubt that Mr. O. Lindsay Thompson (who I had the pleasure of listening to at the last Federal elections) has earned the gratitude of the community in energetically explaining the pros. and cons. of profit-sharing. I have been working hard for 17 years in an iron foundry, have reared a family of four, most of whom are now married, and yet have nothing in the bank for old age, although my labour has returned to my employer hundreds of pounds over and above my wages. If Mr. Lindsay Thompson's scheme of profit-sharing had been introduced some years ago I would now have a settled income from my interest in the business which I have helped to grow.

It makes me sick to think that I must go on till I die, knowing all the time that when that day comes my wife will be penniless. I understand Mr. Thompson is a Liberal, and on that account opposed him at the last elections, but had I given the matter which he advocated such serious thought as I have done since I should certainly have given him a chance to bring his humane policy forward.

Labour rule has done a lot of good for us, but sharing in the profits of the business in which we work will give us a chance to live. In future I support who will advocate profit-sharing.

I am, etc.,
ARTHUR WELLS.

Mr. Unsophisticated (to waiter): "SCOTCH WHISKY, PLEASE."

Mr. Wiseman: "MY DEAR FELLOW, NEVER SAY THAT. THE MAN WHO SIMPLY ORDERS 'WHISKY' DESERVES WHAT HE GETS—BUT THE MAN WHO ORDERS 'JOHNNIE WALKER' IN THE NON-REFILLABLE BOTTLE GETS WHAT HE DESERVES."

The knowing ones have learnt to say "Johnnie Walker" instead of Scotch whisky—that's much the safest, but when you add "in the non-refillable bottle please," mortal man can do no more. Every drop of "Johnnie Walker" Red Label Scotch whisky is over 10 years old.

GUARANTEED SAME QUALITY THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

ON THE LAND.

FARM AND STATION.

EXPORT OF CITRUS FRUITS.

With a full season's crop of nearly a million and a quarter bushels of citrus fruits (oranges, lemons, and mandarins), New South Wales easily takes first place as the citrus-growing State of the Commonwealth. Possessing every advantage of soil and climate, this position can be easily maintained and extended with practically little or no opposition from the other States. As a matter of fact, it is now generally recognised that New South Wales' forte is citrus culture from a fruit-growing standpoint, and there is likelihood of a remarkable impetus being given to this particular branch of the industry as the result of successful experiments in the placing of the fruit on oversea markets. With consuming centres outside the radius of the Commonwealth and New Zealand, confidence in a big demand at profitable rates will be established, and would be the means of a vastly increased area being planted. A glance at the latest fruit-growing statistics gives some idea of the prominent place occupied by the citrus-growers, and it is pleasing news of some importance that the chances of trade with British Columbia are very encouraging. The two hundred cases of citrus fruit shipped to British Columbia by the Department of Agriculture early in July arrived in the best of condition. Mr. Thos. Cunningham, fruit inspector, British Columbia, considered the oranges as good as anything he had ever seen. They were absolutely free from defects of any kind. The two varieties of lemons sent were also regarded as high-class fruit. Writing to the Government Fruit Expert (Mr. Allen), Mr. Cunningham said: "I see no reason why you should not succeed in establishing a very profitable trade with Canada. California has had a monopoly of the citrus fruit trade with British Columbia, and has been receiving large sums of money yearly, and takes nothing from us in return. Now, if this trade can be diverted to Australia, which does take a good deal of merchandise and manufactures from this country, it will be a great benefit to both the Dominion and the Commonwealth." Referring to the prospects of the trade between New South Wales and British Columbia, Mr. Allen said he was very hopeful of building up a big demand for our fruit. He is more than pleased with the manner in which the fruit had carried, and the news should be decidedly pleasing to our own growers. A prominent citrus-grower, asked to express his views with regard to these oversea markets, said they would certainly relieve the business here during the early months of the season, when citrus prices were hardly as good as growers would like. The fact must not be lost sight of, however, that New South Wales at the present time supplies most of the other States, as well as New Zealand, with citrus fruits, and has therefore half-a-dozen very excellent markets near at hand. The trade from year to year, however, does not show any great increase, with the result that the quantities exported from season to season are not sufficiently expansive to warrant the planting of many additional acres. Should oversea markets prove profitable, the present areas under crop should soon be greatly increased.

STATE HORSE FARM.

As already reported, the Government is negotiating to secure North Bangaroo Estate, in the vicinity of Eugowra, for the purpose of establishing a horse stud farm. We understand that the matter has been arranged practically, and preparations are in hand to commence operations. The venture is one that will be watched with interest, and with good management should prove profitable. Some time ago the Minister decided to acquire a property more suitable than the existing State farms to accommodate the Clydesdales imported by the State a few months ago. Since then several properties have been inspected, and Bangaroo has been selected as the most suitable. While some people would have preferred to see a property secured in limestone, hilly country, where horses with good feet would be reared, the estate that has met with the approval of the Minister's advisers has the advantages of possessing what should be good lucerne country. Feed can be grown, and an ample supply be available in the years when the young horse is being made or marred physically. The estate, we understand, also includes some hilly country. The intention is to establish a stud farm and also a property on which the young stock from the Government experiment farms can be taken and reared. It is hoped that the stud farm will also provide agistment for horses from the various Government farms in times of drought, or other special occasions. It is proposed, as soon as the property is taken over, to considerably increase the number of brood mares by the purchase of good class stock in Victoria and New Zealand. It will be seen that the new stud farm promises to be an important and extensive undertaking. While the extension of State enterprise will not meet with approval in all quarters, the value of the addition to our breeding stock by the State importations is admitted, and any increase in the production of good draught stock in this State will be welcome.

THE WHEAT CROP.

IN THE NORTH-WEST.

AN EARLY SEASON.

(BY OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

III.

The outlook for the wheat harvest in the north-west is not as bright to-day as it was about a month ago. Then the north-western district, which comprises Gunnedah, Curlewis, Boggabri, Baan Baa, and Narrabri, had received an average of about an inch and a half of rain each month from April, when sowing began, up to September. Expectations for the coming harvest were high, as a further good fall in September was all that farmers required to set the grain in the ears, and only a disaster caused by storms or fires could then stand in the way of a harvest exceeding all previous records.

Unfortunately the rain received during that month was not heavy enough for many of the crops, particularly those in the more outlying parts of the district around Boggabri, Baan Baa and Narrabri. The district about Gunnedah and Curlewis was more fortunate, receiving falls of twice the volume, and consequently the outlook there is much brighter than further north. There is a great area under wheat around Boggabri, and the high average which might have been harvested had the weather conditions been favourable is very likely to be spoilt by the low returns that will be recorded by many of the crops in the western portion of the district. The land on the eastern side of the Namoi River, towards Manilla, was more liberally treated in regard to rainfall during September than that on the western side, and the crops there are looking much better. Quite a number of these farmers are expecting over 20 bushels per acre. A large portion of these crops had been eaten down by sheep early in the season, and they have stooled out well, being carried through successive stages by steady showers every few weeks.

This is an early district, and most of the crops are out in ear, some of them already beginning to colour. One does not hear much about manuring for wheat in the Boggabri and Baan Baa district, and it is not considered necessary, the soil being fairly rich, and has not been cultivated for many years, as is the case in Riverina. Summer fallowing was not of much advantage this year, though it pays well in nearly every season. As a rule the soil was not in much condition to plough until April, and then all hands had to work long hours to get the paddocks ready for April-May sowing. Farmers favour rather shallow ploughing in this district—about 4in—as the clay lies rather near the surface.

Baan Baa, which lies about 10 miles on the Narrabri side of Boggabri, has come into prominence as a wheat-growing centre during the last few years. It is probably the earliest district in the State, as harvesting generally commences there about mid-October. There are two wheat farmers near there who vie with each other to get the first wheat into the Sydney market, and it will probably be only a matter of days now before one or the other drives the harvester into his crop. The reaper and binder is already at work, and the amount of wheat to be cut for hay has increased greatly during the last week or two, owing to the lack of rain. There are some splendid crops of hay this year, which should cut out very heavily, but the lack of September rain has militated seriously against the wheat yield. There are some who hold that this district has a much better chance of prospering as a hay than as a wheat district if farmers went in specially to grow more dual purpose (grain and hay) wheats, such as Yandilla King, Marshall's No. 3, and Rymer.

One of the best crops this year is that grown by the Kingston brothers about four miles from Baan Baa. There are about 400 acres, most of which looks very well, and should give a good return. Mr. Comrie Thomson, of Caloola, about six miles out, has about 450 acres under wheat, which will be ready to harvest in a few weeks. Yandilla King, which has earned a good reputation in most of the north and north-western districts this year, gives splendid promise, and the Marshall's No. 3 section also looks well. The whole 450 acres was ploughed twice with the one-way discs, and harrowed after the rain came. Mr. Thomson regards ploughing to a depth of 4in as the method most suited to this district, and, as only about 10in have been received during the growing season, it will be interesting to learn the yield under his system of cultivation. Mr. J. E. Florance has about 400 acres under wheat, mostly on the share system. Mr. H. Wheeler has a similar amount of crop near the Namoi River. A large area of wheat is grown around Curracabah, which promised well in August, but the dry weather since then has spoilt the prospect of anything more than a light crop. Many of the crops around Baan Baa which looked quite equal to 15 or 20 bushels per acre a month ago appear now to be more about 12-bushel capacity. Even that will be twice as much as that of last season.

NEW WHEAT LANDS.

MINISTER'S STATEMENT.

The Minister for Agriculture, Mr. Grahame, made an important statement in the Legislative Assembly last night regarding new wheat lands and the Government guarantee of 4s per bushel.

Mr. Grahame said he had further extended the time for the lodging of applications to the 15th inst. It had been laid before him by members representing wheat areas and by farmers themselves that a large number of farmers had failed to send in their applications for the Government guarantee up to the time already fixed, 15th of last month, so he went into the matter. The Government had no intention of side-stepping the guarantee they had given for new wheat lands, and it was desired by the Government that every man who liked to claim the guarantee should have the opportunity. He found that since the 15th of last month claims had come in in respect of 32,000 acres, proving the truth of the representations made to him that many had failed to send in by the date previously fixed. After the 15th inst., however, no application would be entertained, and it would afterwards be necessary for the Government to fix a date by which farmers would have to declare whether they would accept the 4s or hold their wheat for a rise. It would be necessary to transport whatever wheat the Government had to the other end of the world early next year. He had not yet decided what date would be appointed for farmers to make their declaration, but he thought it would be December 1, by which time every farmer claiming the 4s per bushel would have to declare whether he would take it or hold his wheat.

EGG-LAYING COMPETITION.

HAWKESBURY AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

The rules and conditions governing the egg-laying competitions to be conducted at the Hawkesbury Agricultural College, Richmond, which will commence on April 1 next, will be available in a few weeks. The fourteenth competition will be continued for a second year with 20 pens instead of 30, as at present. The fifteenth competition will include single pens only, and will be divided into two sections, the breeds being classified according to weight. Arrangements will be made for carrying a limited number of pens for the second year, and these will also be divided into two sections. A grand champion prize will be awarded to the hen laying the greatest number of eggs in the two years, and a similar prize will be given to the best group of six birds, which put up the highest total without replacement. In future certificates will not be issued to single hens, but only to groups of six birds, which come up to the standard laid down in previous years. As the birds will be kept in single pens, no replacements will be allowed after the first three months of the competition.

HARVEST WAGES.

FARMERS' PRESIDENT SANGUINE.

WELLINGTON.—Speaking at a special meeting of the Macquarie district council of the Farmers and Settlers' Association, Mr. A. E. Hunt, the president of the association, advised members against carrying a proposed motion in favour of fixing a general rate of harvest wages for the district farmers, and said that the association and the Government Labour Bureau were working in harmony, and if the farmers would send a list of their requirements to Sydney the best men available would be sent to them. They were going to pay the ruling rate of wages, and he denied that they were going to be up against any strike. With every man doing his best and the farmers doing the fair and reasonable thing, he felt certain that the harvest would go through with flying colours.

SEED AND FODDER PRICES.

NARRANDERA.—The farmers have been anxious to know what charges would be made by the Government for seed wheat and fodder supplied them. No announcement was made at the time of supplying, though in one case where cash was paid seed was supplied at 6s 9d ex Darling Harbour. The Minister, however, announced that in buying fodder the Government had secured a large quantity at £7 10s a ton, but later on had to make further purchases at an increased price, but would make a flat rate for all. Farmers, therefore, who secured chaff from their neighbours through the Government were under a misapprehension when they thought they were saving anything by supplying bags, labour, etc., in cutting. Accounts have now been rendered by the Department of Agriculture wherein seed wheat is charged at 6s a bushel, and chaff at £8 a ton.

COBHAM LAKE.

QUESTION OF FILLING.

BROKEN HILL.—A West Darling pastoralist, talking of the condition of the West Darling country, stated that the filling of Cobham Lake, which is so necessary for the convenience of the travelling public and stock, as it is the meeting place of three main stock routes, Milparinka to Broken Hill, Queensland to Broken Hill, and Queensland to Wilcannia, is work that the Government officials seem to have failed at. The present main creek, Wirrimatta Creek, has departed from its old course, which used to be direct to Cobham Lake and its waters, now to the great salt lake, which is so salt as to be absolutely useless for stock. The Government first attempted to fill the lake by diverting a creek from Milparinka, and spent several thousands of pounds sterling when the embankment at Boull, at a cost of £1500, to turn the Wirrimatta Creek, failed. The water still flows to the salt lake. An embankment in the vicinity of Dona Park Hotel is considered by local residents all that is necessary to turn the water back to its old channel, and thereby fill the Cobham Lake. The cost, it is estimated, would not exceed £250. This would give ample water at Cobham for the thousands of travelling stock that travel over this dry area.

FARMERS AND GRAZIERS' AGREEMENTS.

A Judge in one of the courts, in a case where damages were claimed in connection with a breach of a well-boring contract, commented on the manner in which agreements were sometimes prepared by the parties, involving themselves in lawsuits; and said that a party, when he made an agreement, should have committed to paper exactly what was required, and not be merely under the impression that certain things had to be done. Addressing a witness, the Judge added:—"If you had committed what was said to paper, you would probably have saved all this litigation." This valuable advice should be taken count of in the making of agreements, thus relieving the courts of the task of interpreting what is in the contemplation of both parties to the transaction, in a case where it has not been committed to writing.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

WASTE WATER FROM LAUNDRY.

"An Old Reader."—Waste water from a laundry would have a deleterious effect upon a vegetable garden, if used regularly, owing to the presence of alkali and fatty acids. It might be used occasionally if the soil is well turned up afterwards, and the water is not put on the same soil continuously.

TRAVELLING CATTLE.

E.H.S.—Under the P.P. Act, a drover must give due notice (i.e., not less than 12 and not more than 48 hours) of intention to pass through or along any run of 200 or more acres, excepting in such cases as the run being separated from the road by sufficient fences, or the stock so driven are fat cattle in drafts not exceeding 200 head travelling to a specific market for sale.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR DIGESTION

and your digestion will take care of you. At any rate, it is certain that when you exercise care with regard to this important function you are safeguarding your health at its base. This is perfectly easy to understand when it is remembered that unless the work of digestion and assimilation is efficiently performed the system will not obtain the nourishment it requires. It commonly happens when the stomach becomes upset that, unless speedy attention is given to the matter, other organs of the body suffer derangement, resulting in general ill-health.

BY TAKING

Beecham's Pills—the famous digestive medicine that more than any other has secured the favour and confidence of the public—disorders of the stomach, bowels, liver and kidneys, are quickly arrested. LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Isaacs, in criminal jurisdiction, and a jury.)

MILITARY CONTRACTS.
DISTRICT PAYMASTER'S EVIDENCE.
TREATED BY CROWN AS HOSTILE.

The hearing was continued of the charges preferred against Arthur Kidman, Major F. W. Page, Major A. G. O'Donnell, and Sergeant Edward Leslie, of conspiring to defraud the Commonwealth of large sums of money by procuring that the Government should pay excessive prices for the supply of goods for the armed forces of the Commonwealth.

The examination of Edward James de Witt, district paymaster, was continued by Mr. Rolin, K.C., who appeared for the Crown. Witness remembered tenders being received from the Federal Food Supply Company (Kidman), Horne, and Simes, for meat for the Randwick Camp in February last. They were opened and considered by Page, O'Donnell, and himself. Horne's and Simes' tenders being the lowest. He was aware of a telegram from headquarters instructing the board not to accept any more tenders in Kidman's name. Witness remembered Colonel Wallack sending for him with reference to an application made by Kidman for an increased price for goods he was supplying. They went to the office, the others present being Lieut. Gibbes (assistant-director of transport and supply), Major Page, the Commandant, and witness. Lieut. Gibbes presented Kidman's application, and Colonel Wallack asked witness if it could be granted. He (Colonel Wallack) said that he had been advised by Gibbes that there was a good reason for granting the increase, and he asked Page if such was the case. Page said he could verify the fact. The Colonel then asked witness if it was in his (Colonel Wallack's) power to grant the higher price, and witness said that it was, if he was satisfied. The Colonel then approved of the increase.

Cross-examined by Mr. Lamb (for Kidman), witness said that when the Commandant sent for witness with reference to Kidman's application for an increase in price he was acting as the Commandant's financial adviser. After Kidman had ceased to supply the Liverpool camp the authorities had to pay higher prices for the goods supplied, and if the Government had carried out Kidman's contract it would have saved money.

In answer to Mr. Pickburn (for Page), witness said that until told by Page he had no idea that certain tenders put in by Kidman under other names were not genuine, and there was nothing about them to make him suspicious. Witness considered that Page was one of the most efficient Assistant-Quartermasters-General the State had had, and he had never spared himself in carrying out his duties.

In reply to Mr. Tayler (for O'Donnell), witness said it was true that as a result of the cancellation of Kidman's contract the military authorities had to pay 7-16d more per lb for meat on an average weekly supply of 222,000lb. Ashcroft supplied meat at 5 1-16d per lb, and on July 30 this price was increased to 6d per lb.

After further questions had been answered by witness, Mr. Rolin asked his Honor's permission to treat the witness as hostile. Mr. Rolin said that certain information was given to him by Mr. Bean in May last, at a special inquiry, but evidence inconsistent with the information was given that day.

The jurors were discharged for the balance of the afternoon, and the matter was argued by counsel. The point had not been decided when the Court rose for the day.

ALLEGED UNION FRAUDS.

Mr. M. S. Love, S.M., yesterday, at the Water Police Court, resumed the hearing of charges against George Clifford Bodkin, of defrauding of various sums of money, the Railway Workers and General Labourers' Association, of which he was general secretary. Mr. Leslie Gannon appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. J. C. Gannon, K.C., and Mr. Hodgson, instructed by Mr. J. B. Moffatt, for the defence. Bodkin pleaded not guilty.

Defendant said that he had been an official of the Railway Workers and General Labourers' Association for about seven years. He had for six years been general organiser, and, part of that period, general secretary. As organiser, he had to travel all over the State, collect money, and adjust grievances of the branches. By arrangement with his executive, he had to pay all expenses out of his pocket, and adjust them by statement at the end of the month. Every penny he had collected was honestly accounted for. On two or three occasions he had been called to task, but when the auditor examined his books he found that witness had paid money twice, and refunds were made to him.

William Rosser, president of the association, said that he had known the defendant for nine or 10 years, and had been associated with his work. Bodkin had a high reputation with the association. Witness paid his accounts by cheque after they had been passed by the executive. The association had passed unanimously a resolution of confidence in Bodkin.

The case will be resumed at the Water Police Court at 2.15 p.m. to-day.

For a time he was connected with the press at Glen Innes, then became associated with a printing business in Melbourne, and finally joined the firm of Roffs in Sydney.

48-HOUR WEEK.

CONFERENCE OF UNIONS.

PERTH (W.A.), Thursday.

The Conference of Unions, which met last week to consider the Government's determination to revert to a 48-hour week throughout the various services, and adjourned, with a view to obtaining definite assurance with regard to the prospect of retrenchment, resumed its sittings at the Trades Hall, Perth, last evening. It was resolved to advise unions which have members on the unemployed list not to accept the 48-hour week proposal.

A meeting of the Fremantle branch of the Australian Society of Engineers, held on Tuesday evening, adopted a resolution, committing members to work the 48-hour week until a ballot of all unions in the Labour movement was taken. It was also resolved that members of the union employed at the State Implement Works should present themselves for work on Saturday morning, and that from Monday next members employed in the railway service should begin to work the 48-hour week in co-operation with the railway union.

MR. MUIR AULD'S PAINTINGS.

Mr. J. Muir Auld has now opened an exhibition of his oil and water-colour paintings at the spacious and uncrowded China and Glassware Gallery of Messrs. Beard, Watson, Ltd., George-street. Amidst these graceful surroundings he shows a considerable collection of his works, the number catalogued being "one hundred, save one." His figure-subjects and larger oils are for the most part at the York-street end of the gallery, where there is a fine light. Here will be admired "Reverie" (No. 20), a charming and refined face in profile, with the pale glow of health suggested in the delicate flesh tones. "A Difference of Opinion" (No. 34), in which the young wife on a couch in the foreground gazes with sad and luminous eyes at the spectator, with the boyish-looking husband looking thoughtfully down within the transparent shadow of the interior. This is a clever and attractive composition. "The Dreamer" (No. 27) is a nude study, picturesquely treated, in which a girl who has been bathing leans her head upon her arm as she gazes reflectively upon the stream, and the stately swan that floats down it with the tide. The flesh tones, with a light shadow upon the back of the seated woman, are pure and effective. "Convalescent" (No. 67), upon another screen, shows a girl propped up against her pillows to read, her arms beneath a patchwork coverlet, and pleases by its sympathy and harmonious colouring. "The Shade of the Gums" (No. 59) is, fortunately, not sufficient to quench the tender gaiety of effect arising from intermittent sunlight expressed in multitudinous touches of tender colour. "Dee Why" (No. 68) shows the village as part of a sunlit view that embraces Long Reef; and the blue water, with its coastline, in the distance. The painter must have been standing near the crest of the rising bush and grass land nearest the spectator. "Colombo" is a vivid impression of a sweltering day under a blue haze of heat, with natives in their boats, "undressed" in multicoloured stuffs of red and yellow. Finally, mention may be made of "Felling the Gum" and "Through the Gum Trees" (Nos. 27 and 28), thoroughly Australian subjects, in which the "character" of the trees, and the open-air effect generally, show to what good purpose Mr. Muir Auld has studied and worked during the past year.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1915.

GREECE AND THE ALLIES.

It is difficult to believe that the facts contained in our cables this morning furnish a complete explanation of the retirement of M. Venizelos, and of the formation of a Ministry from which he is excluded. The history of Greek politics during the war, and especially during the present year, suggests that the crisis is only one incident in a prolonged struggle between the greatest statesman of modern Greece on the one hand and a number of mediocrities, supported by German influence, on the other. It is not only the King who has failed to support his Minister in carrying out the necessary consequences of his order for mobilisation. In the debate in the Chamber of Deputies, M. Venizelos was deserted by half the majority which supported him in his first trial of strength in Parliament, when the danger of inaction was far less obvious than it is now. On the election of a President of the Chamber, M. Venizelos had a majority of 80 in a House of 302. On the vote of confidence his majority was reduced to forty in a far smaller House. It is inconceivable that the accusations made against him by M. Gounaris and M. Theotokis that he was neglecting the interests of Greece for those of the Allies would make any impression on deputies capable of a clear and honest judgment. M. Venizelos, throughout his career, has shown himself a clear-sighted and disinterested servant of the Greek nation. In the course of a five years' premiership he has increased the boundaries of the Greek State, and has introduced order and economy into the administration for the first time. His exertions in Crete, where he made his reputation, united that island to Greece, and thereby realised a strong and legitimate ambition. His diplomacy, in conjunction with the valour of the army, gave Greece the harbour of Salonica and the necessary hinterland for her railways, so that she might become secure and self-contained. Since this war began he has secured from the Powers permission to annex the province of Epirus, with the almost unanimous approval of its inhabitants. The record established during these years has been confirmed by M. Venizelos's conduct since he began to advocate the co-operation of Greece with the Allies. As long as there was a prospect of large additions to Greek territory on the mainland he was willing to cede newly-acquired territory to Bulgaria, in order to secure her neutrality, if not her active assistance. When that prospect became more remote, owing to the Italian declaration, M. Venizelos went to the country with a pledge that he would cede no territory to any Power, and would commit Greece to a war only if Servia were attacked and the independence of the Balkan States thereby menaced. That pledge he has fulfilled in conjunction with the King by his order for mobilisation and his permission to the Allies to land their troops at Salonica.

To say that a Minister who has been permitted to go thus far against Bulgaria has been dismissed for telling his followers the consequences of a German victory is to ask too much of our credulity. M. Venizelos's fall may be attributed far more plausibly to the successful use of those typically German weapons, threats and bribes, which have been employed in Greece by the German Emperor, by his special envoys, and even by the energetic pedants who superintend archaeologic research in Athens. Those weapons have been used not only in the Royal family, but in the Chamber of Deputies and among the Minister's own colleagues. It may be that the new Prime Minister will show that in Greece, as elsewhere, no one man is indispensable. He was a successful Governor of Crete for some years, and showed the same talents which led Baron Burian to office in Austria-Hungary. He is evidently of a cautious temperament, since he refused to form a Ministry after Venizelos's former resignation. So long as he governs in the interests of the Greek people he will be assured of the support of the greatest man in the country. M. Venizelos left the country early in the year rather than remain to be a cause of faction. He will not leave it again after having received the votes of an enormous majority of the electors. M. Venizelos may support a coalition which fulfils the spirit of the Greek treaty with Servia. But that support must be unequivocal, and only on condition that Greece is not to be threatened with a conflict between politicians and King on the one hand and their greatest statesman at the head of the people on the other. British newspapers are evidently prepared to blame Sir Edward Grey for the present crisis, as they are always prepared to blame someone in a moment of disappointment. They forget that it is impossible for a nation to make the best of both worlds. Britons cannot retain their reputation for love of peace, for good faith, and for respect for the rights of independent nations, and still count on the advantages which Germany has gained by her long years of preparation for war, her terrorism, her bribes, and her contempt for small nations. Britain could not coerce Servia, the most democratic country in Europe, into making concessions of which her people did not approve. She cannot now compel Greece to declare war if her people do not wish for it. Critics of Sir Edward Grey should remember that the treaty which gives Servia and her allies the right to use Salonica for their troops is itself a great diplomatic victory. It definitely commits Greece to the side of the Allies, even if her army does no more than mobilise. The responsibility for seeing that this advantage is not lost rests with the soldiers, and not with the diplomatists. It is for them to see that this invasion is not attempted without adequate numbers fully equipped. Quite possibly even now Bulgaria will be deterred from an attack on Servia by fear of her two neighbours. But the Allies will not rely on Bulgarian inactivity or on the possibility of civil war. They will be prepared to help Servia resist a strong German advance, and will remember that through Salonica lies the direct route to Constantinople.

WAR PROFITS.

Anyone who makes exceptional profits from his business directly as the result of the existence of a state of war may well expect the State to step in and take a share. This has been done in England, and rightly so. There are in the old country great munition works which would otherwise have turned the war to their supreme advantage. In America, also, huge profits are being made as the result of war, but in that country there is no particular duty cast upon either the Government or anybody else to confiscate part of the spoils. In the United States a veritable boom has been created in some particular lines closely connected with the supply of the Allies with warlike materials. "Accustomed to millions," says a writer in the New York "Independent," "we were confronted with hundreds of millions, with the billion mark actually in sight. During last February the orders for guns, powder, shells, automobiles, chemicals, horses, etc., began to move gold our way, and by May the flood was on." We are further told that Broadway hotels were filled with men full of importance, who passed through bronze doors and had interviews with attentive bankers. So Colonels Mulberry-Sellers have become back numbers, and Get-Rich-Quick Wallingfords are everyday incidents in Wall-street. Such is one side of the war tragedy now being played in Europe.

But is there anything like an analogous state of affairs in the Commonwealth? The Federal Government holds that there is. The passing of the referendums is, they state, necessary to check it. "Many have made, and are still making, great fortunes out of this war; many more are making higher profit than in peace time, and, despite protestations to the contrary, surprisingly few great companies and capitalists have been seriously affected by the war," so the Government tells us in its plea for an affirmative vote in the referendums. The Government proceeds: "These people frequently pose as patriots. They subscribe £50 to patriotic funds, and fleece the public of £5000 by high prices." Such is the tale that those who father the referendum proposals are endeavouring to pass as truth. We have already stated in no unmeasured terms what we think of this jibe. It is quite unfounded in fact. That there are a few concerns that have increased their profits of late must be admitted, but they are few in number as contrasted with those who have gone back. Yesterday we published the actual results of some representative institutions. It was then shown that such a representative concern as the Bank of New South Wales, whose operations extend to every quarter of the Commonwealth, has made £36,339 less than a year ago, the Union Bank made £42,664 less, the Commercial Banking Company of Sydney £22,610 less, and so on. Where larger profits were made the increases were not heavy, and in practically every instance there were special circumstances that cannot long obtain. Then, practically every producer in the land has had his income cut into in a very marked way. If the facts were disclosed as to the profits made by private concerns which do not disclose their transactions to the public gaze the falling off in incomes would in many instances be found to have been most striking. In some cases that are well known to business men there have been no profits at all, or profits that are totally inadequate as compared with the amount of capital involved. Yet the Government says, with every show of seriousness, that "profits have suffered very little, and in many cases they are higher than before the war."

It is perfectly true that when the war first broke out something like a panic set in among holders and consumers of certain food products, and the State Governments found it necessary to establish price-fixing bodies to regulate selling rates. The local Necessary Commodities Commission did some useful work, though we may not agree with many of its efforts in detail. It had a difficult task set it, and this was accentuated by the existence of a state of drought as well as of a state of war. Indeed, the drought has been a far more important factor than the war in raising prices. No one would have needed to complain of the price of wheat, of flour, of butter, or of forage had there been no drought. No one can be held responsible for the weather. It was an unfortunate circumstance that dry conditions set in in so many of the heaviest-producing districts last season, but the trading class cannot by any chain of reasoning be held culpable therefor. So, in attributing to traders the regrettable incident of the increased cost of living, the Government is using an argument that is quite untenable. The referendum, to become practicable at this juncture, needs a far stronger case made out in its favour than has so far been presented by its advocates.

RECRUITS.

20,000 MEN REQUIRED IN TWO MONTHS.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

October and November are the two months when Australia, according to promise, has to provide 10,000 men, or double the usual monthly number of reinforcements.

After that the old monthly total of 5000 will not again be reverted to, for the new units will mean that the number must be increased.

The total number of recruits enlisted in the Commonwealth since the outbreak of the war is nearing 150,000.

METAL EXCHANGE.

The Federal Attorney-General, Mr. W. M. Hughes, desires to notify those wishing to become members of the Metal Exchange that a meeting has been convened for to-day at 3 p.m. at his office, University-chambers, Phillip-street.

The announcement that a Metal Exchange is to be established in Sydney as well as in Melbourne has given general satisfaction to those interested in the business here.

The chairman of the Sydney Stock Exchange, Mr. E. L. Davis, stated yesterday that Mr. Hughes' statement on the subject was very welcome. "The Metal Exchange will be welcomed," he said. "There is a very large business in metals done in Sydney, and it would be altogether too cumbersome to have to do it through Melbourne. It must be done here."

WOMAN'S NEW ROLE.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

ADELAIDE, Thursday.

A lady justice of the peace occupied a seat on the Bench at the Adelaide Police Court to-day for the first time in the history of the State. The lady was Miss C. E. Dixon, of the Young Women's Christian Association, and the case occupying the attention of the Bench was one which had reference to the alleged procuring of a girl for immoral purposes. Miss Dixon has had considerable experience in rescue work among girls.

UNIVERSAL SERVICE.

THE NATION'S NEED.

LORD ESHER'S WARNING.

EQUAL SACRIFICE.

The following noteworthy letter from Viscount Esher, setting forth what the nation needs to assure complete victory, appeared in the "Glasgow Herald":—

"If, as one of your correspondents suggests, there was time in which to start a national movement I would, he may rest assured, devote myself to it life and soul. But there is no time. To move must be spontaneous on the part of the whole nation, or we shall be too late. In order to count its full value in this war, the self-abnegation of every man and woman, the equality of sacrifice essential to victory, must spring at once into full and active life. What is the use of a Coalition Government and of an amalgamation of 'all the talents' into one dominant body, if the principal of equal service and equal sacrifice cannot be approximately obtained from a nation only asking to be led.

"Even now the meaning of events is misread by the people. It is not surprising. From the outset of the war I have been thrown into the company of practically every one of our leading statesmen, and I have found them all wrong in their forecasts without exception. They genuinely believed in a short war. They prophesied its conclusion in anything from three to nine months. They jeered at a less optimistic view, and hardly one of them but held that before now the British army, accompanied by political plenipotentiaries, would be marching through Berlin.

GERMANY'S STRENGTH.

"During a long and intimate friendship I have rarely, if ever, differed from Mr. Balfour. But I cannot understand his meaning when he lays such stress upon German miscalculation. It amounts to so very little. The Germans undoubtedly had high hopes of achieving more than they have accomplished; but is not this the universal failing of aggressive nations? The real question for us is not what Germany hoped to achieve, but what she has achieved; and if German statesmen miscalculated so did ours. Have we all forgotten the 'steam roller' theory, which was in the mouth of every politician and in the pages of every newspaper?

"There was one exception to the vast host of miscalculators and optimists. That was Lord Kitchener, and to him we owe the army we have got. If he is not interfered with, and if he is supported by the spontaneous gift to him of the supreme effort of the nation, he may even now avert a defeat, which otherwise is inevitable. For we can never forget that from our point of view, the point of view asserted over and over again by all of us, any stoppage of the war short of a complete victory by the Allies spells defeat. There should be no further miscalculation, just as there should be an end of an academic optimism, which has made and is making us the laughing-stock of our enemies.

"I have seen more of this war, from diverse aspects along the long line of the western front, than any one of our countrymen. I have been with the French and English armies for many, many months, and I have come into contact with nearly all of those engaged in conducting this vast military operation. The conclusion forced upon me is that Germany is stronger than we are in the personal guidance of the war, as well as in the concentrated purpose of her people. Within these islands Lord Kitchener is the only man who appears to possess the insight and judgment necessary to control world-wide military operations. In war a multitude of counsel means confusion always, and we have suffered and suffer still from our reluctance to part in war from mechanism that is effective in peace. Yet in 1757 we found ourselves in a similar plight, when mercifully Mr. Pitt took the helm.

WASTE OF EFFORT.

"Secondly, the essential concentration of effort to obtain the largest output with the minimum of cost, both in men and material, is lacking. If victory comes to us, it can only be by a long road. This is the vital reason for economising our resources in men and money, and in putting every man and every penny to its highest use. Our people have done well, but not as well as they would have done had their leaders been frank and sincere.

"The aristocracy, the leisured classes, call them what you will, have given of their best, and the fields of Flanders are covered with their dead. The working classes, so-called, have not been behindhand. In the trenches and the workshops they have paid heavily in suffering and in labour the price of war.

"But there has been, and is, no discriminating guidance, and the result has been waste, lamentable waste, of high effort. If they had known more, had they not been duped by incomplete disclosures, and misled by optimistic forecasts, thousands of our countrymen who even now stand aloof would long before now have conceded that equality of sacrifice without which war cannot be won. Hundreds of capitalists are consenting still to enjoy large profits from the war which a truer reading of the facts would make them ashamed to accept. Thousands of workers are accepting abnormal increase of wages which, did they realise its origin in the sufferings of their mates, their mutilation and death, they would spurn to take.

CARDINAL PRINCIPLES.

"I have already tried to formulate the cardinal principles of that equality of sacrifice which we should all be eager to make.

"1. No one should consent to make financial profit, directly or indirectly, out of the war.

"2. Every man and woman should agree to accept the rate of wage fixed by a State authority.

"3. Every man should agree to go wherever Lord Kitchener tells him, even to death.

"4. We should, all of us, insist that these obligations be imposed by law, for the sake of unity and order, as a token of our determination never to sheathe the sword until our pledges to humanity and civilisation are redeemed.

"If Mr. David Perry and my other good friends in Glasgow who have written to you and to me care to help I will do all in my power to assist.

"But the motive power is in the soul of every man, and the citizens of Glasgow can, if they will, revolutionise the attitude of Great Britain and change the whole aspect of the war. To put out one ounce less than the full strength of the nation, when the cost of three millions a day is being incurred, is the height of criminal folly. To shirk necessary legislation required to enable Great Britain to pull her whole weight in the struggle because of political shibboleths is to cover a splendid people with ridicule.

"To waste precious hours and days when those who have influence and authority, and divine gifts of speech, should be walking barefoot through the streets preaching the gospel of self-sacrifice and of righteous resentment is sacrilege and unworthy of our fathers."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Mr. Fisher said: "We will give our last man and our last shilling." He forgot to add: "If the man will go." Manhood suffrage should mean manhood service. Lincoln hesitated to introduce conscription, but did so, and found the opposition was "only a noisy and contemptible minority of the American people, whose importance, as well as courage, had been vastly overrated." If a democracy, on present lines, could be a success the world would be one great democracy to-day. Many times in history have rulers tried to lead by following the mob, and with the crash the man of the hour came and the people followed him and were saved, but not before the best of them had died as soldiers, or because they would not cheer with the mad mob.

We must put our house in order, and I wish to bring before those who first and last are for our soldiers and our Empire the necessity for us all to start and prepare for the great change which will come when this war is over. We should look for our leaders to the men who have left their work and gone over to fight for us; and if we all, those with father or son, husband or lover, relative or friend at the war, those who have been rejected, and those who are too old or too young, do our best, we will be able to show our returned soldiers a solid party ready to follow them, because we know that as they fought for their country in war so will they fight for it in peace.

Let our young politician, who thinks he can stay here and secure a fat billet, realise that when this war is over his day is done. Let him realise that those who called for him from the trenches are not satisfied because he made a speech in the House and shook hands with a wounded soldier. Let us educate ourselves and our children to look to our soldiers for the salvation of Australia.

I am, etc.,
R. C. RAMSAY.

INTERNED ALIENS.

BATHURST, Wednesday.

The Defence Department has informed the Abercrombie Shire Council that it is not the policy of the Government to compel interned aliens to work. The communication adds that enemy countries do not compel British civilians to work, and it is considered that the adoption of such a proposal here might induce undesirable retaliation by the enemy.

LONESOME PINE.

A VICTORIOUS CHARGE.

(BY TROOPER BLUEGUM.)

GALLIPOLI, Aug. 15.

All the honour and glory of the magnificent charge of our Australians and the capture of Lone Pine Ridge belongs to our infantry comrades.

We of the Light Horse can claim none of the kudos for that gallant feat of arms, though our 7th L.H. Regiment sent out a couple of squadrons in support, and they helped to hold the line during the subsequent counter-attacks.

There was some fierce and bloody fighting during those early days of August all along the line, but the capture of Lone Pine Ridge stands out not only because of the complete success of the operation, but on account of the irresistible dash and daring of the lads from Sunny New South Wales.

The First Infantry Brigade of the Australian Division has done big things since landing in Gallipoli—glorious deeds that will be the pride and boast of successive generations of Australians. It was Colonel Maclagan's 3rd Brigade that achieved undying fame by the electric daring of its picturesque landing, but it was the 1st Brigade which, following hot on the heels of the gallant Thirds on that first memorable day, swarmed up the heights and drove back at the point of the bayonet the successive swarms of fanatical Turks who tried in vain to drive them into the sea. But how dearly was that victory won. How the ranks of these gallant Sydneysiders have been decimated! It is small comfort to us to know that Constantinople reports 120,000 Turkish casualties for the three months after our landing.

The list of senior officers killed is appalling in this First Infantry Brigade. The Brigadier, Colonel MacLaurin, and the Brigade-Major, Major Irvine, were killed. Lieutenant-Colonel Dobbin, who commanded the 1st Battalion, was wounded. Lieutenant-Colonel Braund, of the 2nd Battalion, was killed; so was Lieutenant-Colonel Scobie, who succeeded him, and the Adjutant, Captain Wallack. Lieutenant-Colonel E. Brown, of the 3rd Battalion, was killed, and so was Lieutenant-Colonel Onslow Thompson, of the Fourth. To-day not one of the original battalion commanders retains his command. Not less tragic is the loss of junior officers. In the Lone Pine attack the 1st Battalion lost eight officers killed and nine wounded; while the 2nd Battalion lost nine killed and eight wounded. No one yet knows the total losses, but they are very severe. We captured many hundreds of prisoners, several machine guns, and many thousand rounds of ammunition. But the cost to young Australia was so heavy.

"LIKE A GIBRALTAR."

Lone Pine Ridge is situated right in front of the centre of the Australians' position and was strongly held and fortified like a little Gibraltar. The overhead cover was so strong that our shells made little impression on their trenches. Machine-guns punctuated the line at regular intervals. The open space in front was swept by enfilading fire from the Bloody Angle on the left, and Pine Ridge on the right, while the German gunners behind on Gun Ridge had the range to a nicety. A network of barbed wire entanglements provided a nasty obstacle right in front of their trenches, while "posies" for expert snipers and bomb-throwers completed their defence works. To the trained soldier the position looked absolutely impregnable. Our lads are well trained now. They reckon they are veterans. I who have visited them in camp and on the march round about Liverpool knew the stuff of which they were made. Yet there were those who, ere they left Sydney, said the Australians would only do garrison duty, as it would be murder to put them in the firing line. Competent critics here hold that General Birdwood is the luckiest man in the army in getting the command of the Australians, for no troops in the world could do what they have done. Is this boasting? Ask the staff officers. Ask the French. Ask the Gurkhas and the other Indian soldiers.

The First Infantry Brigade fired not a single shot during that great charge. It was all bayonet work. In the ranks were many of the heroes who landed on the memorable 25th of April, were wounded, and are now back in the firing line. Others have been in the thick of it all the time: no periodical spells such as the soldiers in Flanders get. Others again were the latest reinforcements who left Sydney in June and landed the evening before the battle. Yet these raw youngsters, having their first experience under fire, charged with the best, and wielded a bloody bayonet within the hour. And many of them—Dr. Digges la Touche amongst the number—perished in their first fight.

VERITABLE INFERNO.

Prior to the charge our artillery opened a heavy bombardment of Lone Pine trenches. Shrapnel and high explosives rained down on the Turkish lines. The Turkish gunners in turn opened on our lines a devastating fire, and the resultant roar of heavy guns and screeching of shells created a veritable inferno. I don't know how long it lasted, but suddenly our guns ceased, and on the instant our gallant infantry sprang from their trenches and charged straight ahead. They were over our parapets and well on their way before the Turks could realise it. Then rifles and machine guns started, a murderous fusillade, while the guns in the background sent a hail of shrapnel. Thick and fast fell the attackers. One marvels how any escaped that hell of fire. But, fortunately, only a percentage of the Turks are marksmen. German machine-gunners, however, were very deadly, and the enfilading fire from Pine Ridge increased in volume and effectiveness, and the trail to Lonesome Pine was strewn with khaki figures. Our Light Horse on the right had all their crack shots picking off the Turks on Pine Ridge, while our field guns at point-blank range helped to keep the enfilading fire from this quarter down to a minimum.

Meanwhile the Firsts had almost reached their goal. They were checked for a space by the barbed wire, but hacking their way through they scaled the enemy's parapets, tore aside the overhead cover, leaped into the trenches, and then, free from the murderous cross-fire of machine guns, they resolutely set to work with the bayonet to finish the job. Since the days of Plevna the Turk has been reckoned second to no soldiers in the world behind trenches and parapets. I don't dispute this, but I do claim that in the open or with the bayonet the Turk is not a patch on the Australian. Right along the trenches and saps the Firsts fought their way, bayoneting every Turk or German who did not immediately throw down his rifle. Here and there the defenders made some resistance, and little knots of them would rally for a minute or two. But the Firsts flew at them like eagle-hawks, and a neat bit of bayonet work settled the Turks for good and all.

Soon the cheers of the victors and the cries of the Turks died down. Above the groans of the wounded could be heard the staccato tones of the officers ordering platoons and sections this way and that to defend the position against counter-attack.

Scores of prisoners were led away. Hundreds of captured rifles were stacked. German machine guns were faced about and manned. Bomb-throwers were placed in position. Hot tea was served out to the men. Night fell. Lone Pine was ours.

RED CROSS.

Her Excellency Lady Helen Munro Ferguson was present at the executive meeting of the Red Cross Society, held Thursday. A cable was received from the Governor of Malta, reading:—"Most thankful for your munificent gift, which has duly arrived." This is in reply to the £5000 granted for the relief of the Australian wounded in Malta. Among the motions carried were:—£100 granted to provide a convalescents' marquee and furniture for the Randwick Hospital; £40 granted to supply the 8th Field Ambulance with dental equipment. A motor cycle was also voted for this unit. An additional grant of £3000 was made available for expenditure by the foodstuffs and hospital supplies committee. The sum of £100 was made available for the purchase, by the book depot, of games, etc., for the hospitals and hospital ships.

A supply of knitting cotton is now in hand at the Red Cross Depot, No. 215 George-street, Sydney.

CLERICAL TRAINING FOR WOUNDED SOLDIERS.

At the eighth annual general meeting of the members of the Australasian Corporation of Public Accountants, held recently in Adelaide, the president, Mr. R. W. B. Mackenzie, F.C.P.A., announced that a scheme had been instituted by the corporation for providing free clerical training for returned soldiers who might be prevented by their injuries from following their usual occupations, and who might otherwise be eligible to take up work in offices.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX.

FORMS AVAILABLE.

THE PARTICULARS REQUIRED.

The forms on which returns of income are to be made for the assessment of the Federal income tax were made available yesterday. The forms are different from those of the State income tax. Income is divided into four divisions—viz., income from personal exertion, income from property, income from a trade, business, or manufacture, and income of farmer, pastoralist, orchardist or horticulturist. These parts are headed, respectively, Part A, Part B, Part C, and Part D. Each part has appropriate subdivisions, and a list of deductions is also shown under each part. There are also six statements—viz., partnership statement, trustee's statement, statement of attorney or agent, statement of salaries and wages paid and allowances to employees, dividends from companies, and particulars of money lent on bank deposit, on bonds, debentures, or otherwise, except on real estate. Interest on mortgages is recognised as income from property, and comes under Part B. For furnishing particulars of mortgage income a special sheet is provided.

Regulations will be issued shortly for the guidance of taxpayers, and it is understood that a nominal charge will be made for each copy.

The return of income is asked from all sources in New South Wales during the year ended June 30, 1915, and these returns are to be sent to the Deputy Federal Commissioner of Taxation, Warwick-building, Hamilton-street, Sydney. For a little while longer, however, the office of the Deputy Commissioner will remain in Bent-street. Returns of income derived from more than one State must be made to the taxation office in Melbourne. The return has to be filled in by persons in their own behalf, by firms and companies, agents on behalf of principals outside Australia, and trustees, a separate return being necessary for the income of each separate trust.

INSTRUCTIONS TO TAXPAYERS.

Instructions to taxpayers, which accompany the form, are as follows:—

Omission of any incomes from a return will render the taxpayer liable to a penalty of 10 per cent. of the whole tax assessable.

RETURNS.

Every person in receipt of £157 or upwards for the year 1914-15 is liable to pay income tax.

He must obtain a copy of this schedule, and fill in page 1, and sign the declaration, and deliver or post same to the Deputy Federal Commissioner of Taxation, Warwick building, Hamilton-street, Sydney.

Partners' Individual Returns.—The senior resident partner should make this return and statement. Each partner must make a separate return of his income from all sources, including his share of the partnership profits.

Trustees and beneficiaries in trust estates should note the instructions at foot of trustees' statement, as follows: The senior or active trustee should make this return and statement. The return of each beneficiary who has any other source of income should be attached to, and lodged with, the trustee's return wherever possible.

Agents for non-resident manufacturers and other foreign principals, under section 15 of the Act, are required to furnish a return showing the total amount of sales effected by or through their agency during the year for each principal, in addition to their own individual return.

If he lives in his own house, or occupies a house rent free, the annual value of it is income to him, and he must include 5 per cent. of the capital value of it as income. He can deduct the amount he spent in repairs, rates, insurance, etc., and interest, if he satisfies the Commissioner that the mortgage was made in good faith.

Generally, the proportion of the rent paid which should be included as income under this head, is, (a) for storekeepers, grocers and other similar traders, one-half; (b) hotel-keepers and lodging-house keepers, one-fourth; and (c) doctors, chemists, etc., two-thirds. Where these proportions seem to the taxpayer too high, he should state what he considers a fair proportion, and the grounds upon which he arrives at such amount.

The men, of whom about 147 are New South Welshmen and 34 Queenslanders, will be conveyed to No. 4 General Hospital, Randwick, and after being examined, given an advance of pay and lunch, will be granted leave. It is understood that there are no cot cases on board.

HOSPITAL SHIP ARRIVES.

A hospital ship, with wounded on board, arrived last night, and anchored off Taylor Bay.

Another hospital ship arrived at Fremantle to-day. She has about 300 wounded on board, 40 of whom were for this State.

THE CAMPAIGN.

MONDAY NIGHT'S MEETING.

A big meeting will be held in the Town Hall on Monday evening next, to inaugurate a recruiting campaign throughout the State. Federal and State Ministers and members of Parliament have joined hands in this effort. The Premier, Mr. Holman, will preside. Addresses will be delivered by the Governor-General, followed by Messrs. Hughes (Commonwealth Attorney-General), Cook, and Wade. There will be a programme of patriotic band music. No tickets of admission are being issued, the hall being entirely free to members of the public.

BULGARIA

BREAKS WITH ALLIES.

ULTIMATUM TO SERVIA.

THE WEST.

NEW OFFENSIVE.

The Bulgarian reply to the Russian ultimatum was unsatisfactory. Relations between Russia and Bulgaria have been broken off. The four Entente Ministers at Sofia have demanded their passports.

Reuter's Agency announces that Bulgaria has sent an ultimatum to Servia concerning Macedonia.

M. Venizelos (Premier of Greece) resigned owing to differences of opinion between himself and King Constantine. A coalition Cabinet has been formed, with M. Zaimis (Governor of the National Bank) as Premier. M. Venizelos is not included in the new Ministry.

The French have made another attack on German positions in the Champagne. After thorough artillery preparation the infantry assaulted and carried the village of Tahure, also a height northward of Tahure (halfway between Souain and Cernay).

Advices from Maastricht, in Holland (15 miles north-north-east of Liege), state uninterrupted cannonading is audible there, resembling that preceding the last allied offensive.

It is reported from Amsterdam that there is great excitement in Germany. The commencement of another big French offensive in the Champagne is announced in the latest Berlin communique.

EASTERN FRONT.

RUSSIA'S RECOVERY.

OPTIMISM IN PETROGRAD.

OBSTACLES TO GERMAN ADVANCEMENT.

LONDON, Oct. 6.

In Petrograd the feeling is much more optimistic. In staff quarters the belief is growing that the bottom has fallen out of Marshal von Hindenburg's third grandiose scheme to smash the Russian armies. The natural obstacles to the German advance have enormously increased. Exceptionally heavy rains are flooding the rivers. Only on the Dvinsk front are the Germans showing their old energy and tenacity. Here General von Bulow has mounted 8in guns; but Dvinsk, though only protected by earthworks, is holding out when apparently stronger forts have fallen.

SERIOUS ENEMY LOSSES.

The Russians north and south of Dvinsk continue to capture village after village, with serious German losses. A typical fight occurred at Daninshevo, on the Villa, where the Germans were driven out of the town, but repeatedly counter-attacked. Finally they brought up reserves within 200 yards of the Russian centre, when two Russian companies caught them on the flanks, and the attackers were annihilated. The German troops are utterly exhausted by their five months' fighting, while the Russians are able to recover with the help of endless human and natural resources. The squares and open places in Petrograd are filled with tough, sturdy soldiers.

GERMAN REPORT.

A German communique says:—Russian attacks on a large scale between Drisviaty and Lake Krews (south-east of Novo Alexandrovsk) were repulsed. The enemy was temporarily successful at Kozlany, north-east of Vilna, and south of the Vischnew Lakes, but our counter attacks inflicted heavy losses.

SUBMARINES.

ARABIC CASE SETTLED.

LONDON, Oct. 6.

It is announced in Washington that the Arabic case has now been settled on the basis of Germany apologising and paying compensation for the American lives lost by the sinking of the vessel.

SUGGESTED REPRISAL.

The committee of the Australasian Merchants' Association has resolved that, as German submarine activity has inflicted considerable losses on British merchants here and in the Dominions, the committee suggests that British and Colonial Governments should levy, immediately after the war, special port dues and additional customary port rates on German and Austrian vessels entering the ports of the Empire.

WESTERN FRONT.

OFFENSIVE RENEWED

BY THE FRENCH.

IN CHAMPAGNE DISTRICT.

LONDON, Oct. 6.

A French communique states: Our action in the Champagne secured fresh results. The infantry, after thorough artillery preparation, assaulted and carried the village of Tahure and the summit of a height northward of Tahure, which is 192 feet high, half way between Souain and Cernay, and five miles south-east of Somme-Py. We also made progress in the vicinity of Navarin Farm, between Souain and Somme-Py. The prisoners already total over 1000.

Tahure is the centre of the section of the German line which is now being attacked, and of which it is the key. Tahure is only a mile and a half from the German supply route, the railway running parallel with the Champagne front.

Only severe artillery duels occurred elsewhere.

Reports received in Amsterdam from Maastricht (15 miles north-north-east of Liege) state that uninterrupted cannonading is audible there, resembling that preceding the last allied offensive.

According to an Amsterdam message there is excitement in Germany. The commencement of another big French offensive in the Champagne is announced in to-night's Berlin communique.

REAL WARFARE.

A French soldier has given a harrowing description of the Champagne battlefield as seen by him while searching for his fallen comrades. He states that the German barbed-wire was only fifty yards from the French first-line trenches. The effects of the terrible bombardment were to be seen everywhere. The soil was burst open by shells. It was impossible to go thirty yards without seeing the terrible havoc which was wrought by the big shells.

There were sometimes several corpses twisted together. Some had their arms raised unsupported. One was found leaning against a trench in the act of taking aim. There was no rifle, though the arms and fingers were sticking stiffly in the air. He passed the bodies of more Zouaves and Algerians in front of the second line of trenches, whom machine-guns had mown down, also several abandoned German machine guns on the border of the wood, which cost the French dearly. The wood itself was thickly strewn with German dead. The French advance at this point was five and a half miles in a straight line. He met wounded soldiers who told him that the infantry said with enthusiasm, "At last we are going ahead. This is true warfare."

GERMAN COMMUNIQUE.

A German communique says:—After a violent bombardment the enemy in the Champagne attempted to renew the offensive. Our artillery checked the movement, inflicting severe losses.

SPELTER CARGO.

CONDEMNED AS PRIZE.

AUSTRALIAN METAL COMPANY.

In the Prize Court to-day judgment was delivered in the case of the application by the Crown for the condemnation of 6710 tons of spelter aboard the Bilbster, which the Australian Metal Company consigned to Merton and Co., London, but really intended for Germany.

When the application came on for hearing last month Mr. F. E. Smith, K.C., on behalf of the Crown, said the Metal Gesellschaft of Frankfort, Beer, Sondheimer, and Co., Frankfort, and Aaron Hirsch and Sohn, of Halberstadt, were interested in the cargo. The three firms named dominated the base metal market. It was a remarkable instance of the manner in which the German octopus threw out its tentacles. The Court had to decide whether J. and M. Gunn, owners of the Bilbster, were able to claim £7456 freight. The Crown resisted the claim, because Merton and Co., although they knew the cargo was for an enemy destination, attempted to avert capture. Merton and Co. paid the shipowners £5000 on account of freight. As Mertons did not give assistance, they attempted to deceive. The Crown also objected to the Germans' claim.

In delivering judgment, the President of the Court, Sir Samuel Thomas Evans, said the sole question for decision related to the claims of the shipowners, Messrs. J. and M. Gunn, for freight, and the claim of Merton and Co. for the return of £5000 sterling paid to the shipowners in respect of freight.

The President held that Merton and Co. could not recover against the shipowners, who had discharged their obligation by giving up their lien on the goods. For whoever £5000 was paid, it was intended to preserve the goods for the owners, who Merton and Co. knew were enemies, and to gain advantage for themselves or their co-adventurers—the Metal Gesellschaft. They thus had not hesitated to engage in commercial intercourse with the country's enemies. The claim was without foundation. It required much assurance to launch a claim, and to persevere showed a reckless want of appreciation of the possible consequences.

The judgment of the Court was that the cargo be condemned as a prize; that out of the proceeds £2546 sterling, the balance of the sum awarded, be paid to the shipowners; and that Merton and Co.'s claims against the shipowners and Crown be disallowed.

AMERICAN NOTE.

TO BRITAIN.

THE GERMAN BLOCKADE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.

The Administration is preparing to negotiate with Britain on the alleged interference with trade.

A new American Note is in course of preparation, contending that the British Government must show that the goods of neutral destination which are destroyed or seized are intended for Germany, and that the assumption that all foodstuffs going to Germany are intended for army purposes is not justified.

MERCHANT SHIPPING.

LONDON, Oct. 6.

Arrivals: At Toulon, R.M.S. Omrah (left Sydney August 28); at San Francisco, schooners Alvena and Lottie Bennett.

THE BALKANS.

BULGARIA.

REJECTS RUSSIA'S DEMANDS.

COALITION MINISTRY IN GREECE.

LONDON, Oct. 6.

It is announced in Petrograd that the Bulgarian reply to the Russian Note is unsatisfactory, and relations have been broken off.

A Reuter's message from Petrograd states that Bulgaria has rejected the Russian demands, and has sent an ultimatum to Servia concerning Macedonia.

The Paris "Matin" says that all Bulgarian ports on the Danube have been closed, even to Roumanian steamers.

M. VENIZELOS' RESIGNATION.

Reuter's Agency reports that M. Venizelos (Premier of Greece) has resigned.

The King informed M. Venizelos that he was unable to pursue the Cabinet's policy to the end. M. Venizelos then resigned, and the resignation of the Venizelos Cabinet was accepted.

M. Venizelos, who was interviewed, said that after his clear declarations in the Chamber of Deputies on the Cabinet's policy, which were otherwise well known to the King, the latter informed him that further co-operation between them was rendered impossible. He believes the King favours a coalition Cabinet.

An Athens message says that M. Zaimis is to form a Coalition Cabinet with M. Venizelos excluded.

King Constantine conferred with Parliamentarians and begged the assistance of former Premiers. The conference finally decided on a coalition Cabinet under M. Zaimis, Governor of the National Bank.

INSULTING TO GERMANY.

It is reported from Athens that there have been differences of opinion between M. Venizelos and King Constantine since the mobilisation decree was issued. M. Venizelos then offered to resign, but King Constantine refused to accept the resignation, as both agreed that mobilisation was necessary, and should be defensive in character, aiming solely at preventing Bulgaria attacking Servia. An official communique was accordingly issued stating that an agreement had been established between the King and M. Venizelos.

After the debate in the Chamber, where the Opposition violently attacked M. Venizelos, and vainly attempted to vote the Cabinet out of office, the German Minister went to King Constantine and bitterly complained that some of the expressions M. Venizelos had used in the debate were insulting to Germany. King Constantine immediately summoned M. Venizelos and reproached him for going beyond the terms of the explanation agreed to between them.

M. Venizelos reminded the King that he had reserved full liberty of action if personally attacked, but said that, having incurred the King's displeasure, he felt bound to tender the Cabinet's resignation. It is understood that M. Venizelos promised to support a coalition Government if it maintained the mobilisation of the army.

The dramatic resignation of M. Venizelos is the sole topic of public discussion in Britain, even overshadowing the renewed French offensive in the Champagne. The latest telegrams show that the four Entente Ministers at Sofia have demanded their passports.

The newspapers accept M. Zaimis's accession to power. He is a practical rather than a brilliant politician, but it is acknowledged that his straightforwardness and honesty of purpose have earned him the universal respect and esteem of his fellow-countrymen. M. Zaimis' sympathies are with the Entente Powers.

The resignation of M. Venizelos caused profound astonishment in political and diplomatic circles in Rome. The incident is compared with Signor Salandra's resignation. The Servian military mission has arrived in Rome, and is conferring with the King and General Cadorna (Commander-in-Chief).

NEWS HEAVILY CENSORED.

Only heavily censored messages are received from the Balkan capitals, containing the barest facts. A Sofia telegram states that the city is calm. King Ferdinand and Dr. Radoslavoff to the very moment of the disembarkation of the Allies at Salonica were convinced that the Entente Powers would not pass beyond the limits of diplomatic action. Numerous Bulgarian officers are offering their resignations. King Ferdinand refuses to accept them, and has issued a proclamation that, in the event of war, officers resigning will be regarded as traitors.

Travellers from Sofia reaching Bucharest comment on and compare the present mobilisation with that at the time of the Turkish war, when the troops departed garlanded with flowers, whilst the populace sang soul-stirring songs. Now the peasants do not conceal their discontent.

ROUMANIA'S POSITION.

Roumanian troops have been sent to the Bulgarian frontier, where Giurgevo, the Danube terminus of the Roumanian railway to Turkey, is being feverishly fortified.

It is reported from Vienna that the concentration on the Servian frontier has been completed. German officers are in supreme command. Sixty thousand Austrians have been detached from the main force (which includes 100 batteries) to attack at Klenak (on the Austro-Servian frontier, westward of Belgrade). General von Mackensen's army has been able to leave the Pripet marshes and retire east of Brest-Litovsk. Portion of the army has gone to Servia.

PRESS COMMENT.

The "Morning Post" says: "The time has come for nerve and resolution at the Foreign Office. It is insufficient to have lofty views. If Greece is helpless in the hands of a faction to defend her national interests, our army and navy must free her from that faction. A recent treaty gives Servia the right to use Salonica, and this is a much more promising avenue for the Anglo-French armies than Gallipoli. Several hundred thousand troops ought to be sent immediately to protect Servia."

The "Daily Chronicle":—"The Entente Powers must push ahead and show that they mean business. There has been enough fumbling with the Balkans question. Really imposing forces must be landed without delay at Salonica, and powerful squadrons should be sent to Greek waters.

The "Daily Mail" complains that the name of the British officer commanding at Salonica has been withheld in Britain, despite the fact that it appeared in a German newspaper and several Italian newspapers on the 4th inst.

The French newspapers have reserved their comments on the Greek crisis, and agree that nothing should interfere with the Macedonian expedition, which must be carried through promptly with sufficient forces to ensure success.

The "Daily Graphic" attributes the German diplomatic success to the bribery of Greek, Bulgarian, and Roumanian newspapers and politicians, but says it is necessary to remove the impression of an Austro-German military success.

It is likely that other newspapers will insist on the necessity of increasing the army already at Salonica to the maximum.

"Der Bund," a Berne (Switzerland) newspaper, states that King Constantine protested against M. Venizelos extending the Greco-Servian treaty to cover not only the event of Bulgaria attacking Servia, but also the latter being attacked by Bulgaria's ally. It is now probable that Bulgaria will support King Constantine's intervention by not attacking Servia, contenting herself by holding a strong Servian force inactive.

AUSTRIAN STATEMENT.

It is reported from Washington that the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister has issued a statement to the American press, pointing out that Britain and France, while protesting against the neutrality of Belgium being violated, had not hesitated when it suited their purpose to violate the neutrality of Greece. He adds: "Perhaps the world will now see how little worth there is to the smallest States in the phrases of the Entente Powers."

OUR WOUNDED

IN ENGLAND.

MAJORITY AT WANDSWORTH.

LONDON, Oct. 6.

If the friends of Australian and New Zealand wounded officers who are in London were to see where they are quartered they would feel no anxiety on their account. The majority of them are now at Wandsworth, the Third London General Hospital, where they sit in beautiful open grounds in which new huts have been erected—some of iron and others of stucco, lined with fibro cement. The interiors are bright and attractive. The inmates can read and walk in the grounds, and are taken in motors to three concerts and other entertainments weekly. The outside wards are connected with the hospital by long glass-enclosed corridors. Many captains and lieutenants from each State are in the ward at the extreme end. The corridors have been christened "Tipperary" because the Australians said "they were a long way to go."

Dotted around the ground are revolving huts for the open-air treatment. They are turned according to the direction of the wind and rain. The hospital is administered by Colonel Porter, and is under new arrangements. Drs. Syme, Maudsley, and Dunhill are associated therewith.

SOME OF THE INMATES.

There are the following among the inmates:—

Colonel MacNicol, thrice operated, walking on crutches, expects to leave in a fortnight.

Colonel Brazier, 10th Light Horse, bullet wounded eyelid, sight of eye impaired, recovering.

Colonel Burnage, 13th A.I.F., shrapnel wounded left arm, slowly improving.

Colonel Deeble, 7th Light Horse, enteric.

Major Travers, 7th A.I.F., wounded right leg, another in the left thigh, not serious, convalescent.

Major Storey, 4th A.I.F., gunshot in leg, improving.

Major McKay, 4th A.I.F., shot in shoulder, recovering.

Major Whitehead, 8th A.I.F., enteric, convalescent.

Captain Hodgson, 1st A.I.F., severe wound in pelvis, improving.

Captain Code, 9th Light Horse, shot in the ear, improving.

Captain Mitchell, 8th Light Horse, injured in eye by bomb explosion, not thought to be permanently impaired.

Captain Kean, 18th A.I.F., bullet extracted from shoulder, improving.

Captain Robinson, 10th Light Horse, wound in neck.

The following have just left the hospital convalescent:—Colonel Lee, Colonel Arnott, Major Macknight.

Most of the New Zealand officers are progressing well. Major Dawson is able to take up temporary duties at Weymouth. Major Scholfield, shrapnel wound, is on leave. Major McLean, chest wound, is still in the hospital. Major Luxford, chaplain, has lost a leg. Chaplain Hardham, injured lung, is convalescent.

Seven thousand wounded Australians are now in England, many suffering from the loss of a limb. Two artificial limbmakers who are at work at Harefield were brought from Victoria. Twenty soldiers at Harefield alone have lost a leg. The artificial legs will be made of Government material at the hospitals by the Victorians, it is estimated, at a third of the usual cost.

ARMENIA.

A TURKISH SHAMBLES.

QUESTIONS IN LORDS.

LONDON, Oct. 6.

Lord Cromer, speaking in the House of Lords, asked whether the Government had official information that German consular officials were privy to the massacre of the Armenians. Lord Cromer added that one of the objects of the war was that Armenia should no longer constitute a Turkish shambles. Turkey made government by massacre part of her political system.

The Marquis of Crewe (Lord President of the Council), in reply, said the Government had received information that the population in one district had been absolutely exterminated. He had no official confirmation that the German consuls encouraged these horrors, but he was bound to state that, knowing what happened elsewhere, it could not be said to be an antecedent improbability that such was the case.

Lord Bryce said that from figures he had received it was quite possible that 800,000 had been destroyed since May. The only chance to save the remnant was by neutral countries exerting their influence with Germany.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

The London newspapers give prominence to Captain C. E. W. Bean's (official correspondent with the Australian Imperial forces) story, "Twenty-four Hours at Quinn's Point."

The War Office has suspended the house-to-house canvass for recruits. Before the pink forms are used the Earl of Derby (Director General of Recruiting) will confer with the committee of the Trade Union Congress.

LATE WAR NEWS.

BULGARIA.

MANY DISTURBANCES.

SALONICA RAILWAY THREATENED.

LONDON, Oct. 7.

Bulgaria is concentrating at Strumnitza (about 65 miles north of Salonica), and threatens the Salonica railway. There are disturbances at Sofia, Rustchuk, Tirnova, Varna, Philippopolis, and Burgas.

Dr. Radoslavoff (the Premier) has reassured the Roumanian and Greek Ministers of his friendship.

ALLIES' TROOPS.

LEAVING FOR SERVIA.

LONDON, Oct. 7.

The allied troops are landing and departing rapidly towards Servia. The whole operation is merely an orderly transit through Greece.

The pro-German Bulgarian newspaper "Kambana" states that Bulgaria has undertaken to place her railways at Germany's disposal, also to attack Servia, while 300,000 Germans will attack Northern Servia. Germany has promised in the event of Roumanian interference to send another 200,000 against Roumania. Bulgaria's reward is to be the possession of Servian Macedonia, with a free hand ultimately to settle accounts with Greece.

SERVIAN MINISTER.

It is reported from Sofia that the Servian Minister has asked for his passports.

BULGARIAN OFFICERS ARRESTED.

Bucharest messages state that several Bulgarian officers disguised as peasants have been arrested in Roumania for making plans of the frontier fortifications.

WAR NOTES.

THE WESTERN OFFENSIVE.

Our suggestion of yesterday that the Allied offensive in the west had already been renewed, is borne out in gratifying fashion this morning, as the cables tell us of further notable gains in the Champagne region. The main weight of the attack on this occasion appears to have been delivered in the very centre of the line between the Suippe and the Aisne. Almost exactly midway between those two streams is Tahure, a little village of a couple of hundred inhabitants—in peace time, that is. It is at the very head of the shallow valley of the Dormoise, the stream which runs eastward through the Champagne to the Aisne. Just a little to the north of the village under a mile—the ground rises to a height of 192 feet; that is above sea level, but from the general level of the country hereabouts it is merely a low smooth mound. It is, however, with the exception of another such mound in the vicinity of Navarin farm, a few miles westward of Tahure, the highest point on this small section of the battlefront. This hill, or mound, was the key to the German positions which the French attacked in their latest effort. The procedure of the attack was the same as on the lines already familiar to us—a violent bombardment by the artillery, cutting up the barbed wire entanglements, and battering the German trenches, then the infantry assault. The attack appears to have been immediately successful, as far as the central position was concerned, for the French took the village of Tahure, and, passing on, stormed the low height beyond, which is now in their possession. Progress is also reported from the neighbourhood of Navarin farm, over to the left. No details of the action had come through up till midnight, beyond a statement that "already 1000 prisoners have been taken." Thus we may take it that the fighting is still in progress, and we may confidently expect to hear of further gains before the impetus of the assault dies down.

THE MENACE TO THE RAILWAY.

But even so far the results are particularly gratifying, in so far as the Tahure hill is only a mile and a half from the railway running behind the German positions, which represents their all-important lateral line of communication. This is the closest the French have so far penetrated to this railway, which is the immediate objective of all this fighting in the Champagne. Over to the extreme left, near Auberive, they are within about two and a half miles of it, but, having got so far there, the Germans seem to have held them up. At Navarin farm the French are also about two and a half miles from the line. This farm is almost due south of the village of Somme-Py, a station on the line just at the head of the little stream Py, which flows westward into the Suippe. As the line runs eastward from Somme-Py it dips slightly to the southward before curving north-eastward to the important junction of Challerange, and it is the southernmost point of this dip that brings it within a mile and a half of the Tahure hill. From that hill the country gradually falls all the way to the railway, so that the French are now looking down upon it, and are in a position comfortably to "spot" for their guns behind Tahure when the latter are turned against the line. In these circumstances, the railway has already become of very questionable value to the Germans, and another thrust forward or two like the last couple of efforts should bring the French infantry down on to the line itself.

THE BRITISH SECTION.

Up till the time these notes were written not a word had come through about any move on the part of the British troops, but an Amsterdam message states that Maastricht has reported that uninterrupted cannonading is audible there, "resembling that which preceded the last Allied offensive." We may almost take it for granted that the British are on the point of launching another attack, and that the bombardment reported from Maastricht represents the prelude to it. Such a bombardment would not be confined to one particular section of the front, but would be spread over a considerable area, with the object of concealing from the enemy, as far as possible, the point which General French has decided upon for his forward thrust, thus preventing them from concentrating their reserves at the right place. It is hardly conceivable that the French would launch their second attack in the Champagne without a corresponding effort being made at some other section of the line far removed from that district, as the whole essence of the Allied plan at present is to exert as great a pressure as may be upon more than one point simultaneously, and thus place the maximum strain upon the enemy's resources in men and artillery, in the meantime utilising the air service to dislocate, as far as possible, the rail communications behind the lines, and thus hamper the conveyance of reserves to the most seriously threatened points.

THE BALKAN TANGLE.

The Balkans are certainly living up to their reputation in the matter of confounding the prophets, and the latest turn of events is apt to leave us with the feeling that it is utterly futile to attempt to sum up the situation. It is becoming increasingly clear, however, that the Entente's diplomacy has not borne fruit in this region. After a whole year of effort, Bulgaria is definitely against us, and Greece is—well, one is inclined to ask if the diplomatists really know where Greece does stand. One London newspaper implies that Greece is "helpless in the hands of a faction," but the recent Parliamentary division—142 to 104, with several absentees—suggests that "faction" is a term slightly too narrow to fit the occasion. As to Roumania, we know that she has undertaken to come to Servia's aid, if the latter is attacked by Bulgaria—a similar undertaking to that given by Greece—but a considerable effort has been put forth on the part of the Entente to get her to enter the field against the Austro-Germans by the side of Russia, and in this latter connection we have some slight excuse for wondering if the Entente diplomacy is going to secure any more than the continued neutrality of Roumania. It is certainly to be hoped that the whole position will be very speedily cleared up, because matters have now reached such a pass as between Bulgaria and the Entente that it becomes essential we should have a plain and unequivocal declaration of the course both Roumania and Greece intend to take. Owing to the Bulgarian reply to the Russian ultimatum being unsatisfactory, the Czar's Government has broken off diplomatic relations, and this step has been followed by the whole of the other Entente Ministers at Sofia requesting their passports. This means that military action against Bulgaria is practically inevitable. Only some very sudden and dramatic development can now prevent it; but the hostile steps Russia will take must necessarily be largely influenced by the attitude of the other Balkan States.

EXPEDITIONARY FORCE REMAINS.

This much appears to be certain, that the Allied expeditionary force, having landed at Salonica, will not now be withdrawn. Whether its presence will have the effect of staying Bulgaria's hand against Servia or not remains to be seen; but even if it does, the Allied troops will find ample outlet for their energies in connection with the forthcoming Austro-German attack upon our little southern ally. So far no indication has been vouchsafed us as to the strength of this expeditionary force, but it is sincerely to be hoped that the Anglo-French authorities will see to it that it is a force sufficiently strong to carry through any task that may be allotted to it. Looking at Bulgaria alone, it is quite possible to take her a little too lightly. The Bulgarian army has always borne the reputation of being, for its size, one of the best forces on the continent, and in the first Balkan war, when it was mainly instrumental in breaking the Turkish military power, it proved that it needs must be taken very seriously. There have been one or two unfortunate instances in the present war of inadequate forces being allotted certain tasks, and we trust that the lessons of the past are being now borne in mind. We cannot, of course, too strongly reinforce the Servians holding the line of the Danube. Evidence is piling up which shows that the Austro-German bolt to be launched there is to be a most formidable one, and the more decisively it is countered the greater the effect on the course of the campaign as a whole. As a matter of fact, should all go well with the Allied arms in this region, there is a distinct prospect of a thrust being made at the vitals of Austria coincidentally with a new offensive on the part of the southern Russian armies.

DEATH OF COL. WALLACE.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

Colonel Robert Wallace, State Commandant of Victoria, died to-day from throat affection. He had been ill for some months. He was born in Castlemaine (Victoria), in 1864. After being in command of the Royal Australian Artillery in Victoria from 1902 to 1905, he was appointed State Commandant of Western Australia, and subsequently took over command of the Royal Australian Artillery of New South Wales, a position which he held from 1906 to 1910. He was then appointed chief of ordnance, and last year, on Colonel Parnell being appointed to succeed the late Major-General Bridges at the Military College, Duntroon, Colonel Wallace was made Commandant of Victoria. Colonel Wallace served in the South African War, and was awarded the Queen's Medal with two clasps. He leaves a widow and two children.

CLERGY IN THE RANKS.

FIELD AMBULANCE WORK.

In a letter to the Rev. E. N. Wilton, Precentor of St. Andrew's Cathedral, Dean Talbot comments on the contribution which, apart from the supplying of chaplains, the clergy of New South Wales have made to the expeditionary forces.

"In one field ambulance alone there are three of our clergy," he writes. "Private Andrews was the vice-principal of the Bush Brotherhood, Dubbo. It is an object-lesson to see a man of his culture and education roughing it in the ranks. He has been able to arrange many informal services for his comrades, and is doing excellent work. Private MacGregor, who is a deacon and was one time at Maitland, is a stretcher-bearer of the same ambulance, and has had the distinction of being mentioned in despatches. Lance-Corporal Maxted, late rector of St. Oswald's, Haberfield, was in the ranks of the A.M.C., but is now attached to the general headquarters. A son of the Bishop of Newcastle is, he mentions, a sergeant in one of the battalions, two sons of the Rev. H. Howell Price hold commissions, and Canon Stott, of Newcastle, is a sergeant on the staff of one of the base hospitals.

"A TERRIBLE NIGHT."

The following extracts are taken from letters from Private Sydney John Holland, 13th Battalion, written from Alexandria Hospital to his parents at 51 Collins-street, Surry Hills:—

"August 14: I took part in the big advance on August 6, and was fighting all night and on the morning of the 7th. M'Kenna and I were sent out to try and find some water, as our bottles were empty. I had not gone far when I was sniped from behind, the bullet going through my right thigh. M'Kenna bandaged my leg, and then went for the stretcher-bearers, who carried me to the dressing hospital, from where I was conveyed to the hospital ship.

"August 20: I have been under an operation, and had the bullet taken out of my right thigh, and am progressing splendidly, and hope soon to be able to get about and return to my mates. I am keeping the bullet as a keepsake. It was a whole cartridge, and caused me a deal of pain. The fighting was terrible; one could hardly escape being hit, as shells and bombs were flying in all directions.

"August 24: Now allowed up for a little while each day. Doing grand, and receiving excellent attention and food. Chicken for dinner is not too bad after living on bully beef and biscuits for four months. On August 6 we advanced the whole line, and things were very warm, bombs, shells, and bullets flying all round us, and numbers of dead and wounded were lying all over the place. It was a terrible night—even worse than the first week of landing, or May 29, when the Turks attacked us."

VICE-REGAL TOUR.

NARRABRI, Thursday.

His Excellency the Governor and Lady Edeline Strickland, accompanied by the Misses Strickland and Mr. and Mrs. George Black, and attended by Mr. H. C. Bridge, official secretary, arrived at Narrabri this morning. At 10.15 a large gathering of townspeople assembled at the railway station, and headed by the town band escorted the party to the town hall, where the Mayor (Alderman Spencer) welcomed him to the town, and presented his Excellency with an album and an address. The public school was next visited, and the pupils presented Lady Edeline Strickland with a floral bouquet. At the convent the Governor was presented with a beautiful banner and an address. His Excellency next visited the hospital and the newly inaugurated training camp on the racecourse, where he reviewed and addressed between 80 and 90 recruits under Captain Timbury, and at 2.30 the party motored up Eulah and O'Cullawa creeks, inspecting the various farms, which just now show a perfect wheat crop. This evening a public reception will be held in the Town Hall. The party will leave in the morning for Wee Waa.

VICTORIAN LIQUOR ACT.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

The Commissioner of Police (Mr. Sainsbury) has received reports from various police officers regarding defects in the Liquor Restriction Act, which came into operation in July. They all agree that the Act is an absolute failure, as it affords too many loopholes for evading the law. Recommendations are made for improving the Act.

POOR EIGHT-HOURS DISPLAY.

BROKEN HILL, Thursday.

The Eight-hours procession at Broken Hill to-day was a dismal affair, there being no union displays. Many of the men marching wore badges, which read: "If you want a 48-hour week, take it!" These badges were circulated by the extremist section of the unionists.

SERBIA'S ATTITUDE.

A REPLY TO BULGARIA'S DEMANDS.

(FROM THE "WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.")

NEW YORK, August 15.

M. Boshkovitch, the Serbian Minister in London, in reply to inquiries by a representative of the Associated Press concerning the Bulgarian claims recently put forward from authoritative Bulgarian sources and printed in the American and British press, said:—

"The position of Serbia towards the Bulgarian claims is clear. Serbia has never admitted that the Slavs of Macedonia are Bulgarians. This is shown also by the terms of the Serbo-Bulgarian Treaty of 1912, wherein Serbia agreed to recognise the right of Bulgaria only to territory lying east of the Rhodopes and the Struma River. The concession made to Bulgaria in 1912, upon which she attempts to base her present claims, was motived by considerations of political expediency, and was offered upon certain strictly defined conditions, which were not fulfilled. This latter fact, coupled with the intervention of Austria to our detriment, and the aid which we rendered to the Bulgarians at Adrianople, necessitated our requesting a revision of the treaty; and we accepted the Russian proposal of arbitration, which had been provided for in the treaty. The Bulgarians appeared prepared to arbitrate, but unexpectedly attacked us in June, 1913, and thus precipitated the second Balkan war. In company with our ally, Greece, we beat the Bulgarians back to their old frontiers, and thus obliged them to sign the Treaty of Bucharest.

"It is perfectly obvious that, in attacking us, Bulgaria destroyed the Treaty of 1912, and, with it, her claim to Macedonia; and it is quite impossible to efface the tragic record of 1913 from history. Our sacrifices, forced upon us, were enormous; and we now hold the territory by a double right of conquest and nationality. Further, it must be remembered that we are now obliged to regard Bulgaria not as a friend, and there thus arise also important strategical considerations for retaining our present possessions and for having a long frontier with Greece. Any attempt to demand concessions on the ground that the Macedonians are Bulgarians merely renders the problem more difficult of solution. Serbia has never acknowledged this, and cannot enter into any discussion which is based upon such an assumption. If certain concessions could now be made upon certain conditions it would be only for reasons of political expediency, and in order to assist the general cause of the Allies; but it would, in our view, imply the surrender of a part of Serbia and a population of Serbs.

"A settlement of the existing deadlock calls for concessions on both sides. At present Bulgaria wants to take all and give nothing. She claims the maximum of her territorial pretensions, and, what is perhaps more extraordinary, claims to take immediately; and Serbia is expected alone to make all the sacrifices. Truly, it could hardly be said that this is fair play. Bulgaria professes to have no concern with our compensation, which renders it all the more necessary that we should seek to safeguard our own interests. Bulgaria has nothing to expect from an Austro-German victory in the Balkans, as the whole of Macedonia, with Salonica, could pass into Austrian possession. After Serbia, Bulgaria, in her turn, would be the victim of the German 'Drang nach Osten,' and also of Turkish pretensions to take back at least one part of the lost territories in the west. That is why Bulgaria would have good reasons to be more moderate and to take account of what it is possible to do in the present circumstances.

"In the meantime our business is to hold ourselves ready to repel any further Austro-German attempt to break through to Constantinople and prevent the successful prosecution of the Anglo-French offensive against the Dardanelles."

JAPAN'S COMMERCE.

A FALSE PROSPERITY.

GO-AS-YOU-PLEASE METHODS.

Mr. A. S. Browne, who went to Japan about eight months ago under engagement to the Japanese Government to visit the manufacturing centres and advise on the classes of goods suitable for export to Australia, has just returned to Sydney.

Mr. Browne's itinerary covered practically the whole of Japan, and his investigations embraced the Government steel works, dockyards, shipbuilding, electric works, spinning and weaving, silk conditioning, bronze, porcelain, enamel, and earthenware works, chemical works, the manufacture of basketware—in fact, almost every line of goods that is made in Japan. He is very decided in the opinion that great reforms must take place to enable Japanese manufacturers to compete with those of other nations. Wherever he addressed the manufacturers he never failed to emphasise the need for reform, and his advice and suggestions were welcomed, and in many instances manufacturers were already effecting improvements. In regard to prices quoted by manufacturers, they were most reasonable, but as the goods had to pass through several hands this process increased cost, and often quality was made to suffer to offset loss. Japan was at the present time enjoying a false prosperity in her trade. It was not in every instance because the goods, quality, and prices were all that they should be that they were bought, but because for many lines Japan was the only market at present open to Australia. Unless, therefore, the Japanese established a sound reputation for commercial efficiency and integrity they would drop back into the position occupied previously.

"My impression as to Japanese cheap labour was soon disillusioned when I saw the people at work," Mr. Browne continued. "No doubt they are low paid, but the return is equally so. To see Japanese men at work made me feel that they are a very satisfied, easy-going race, who reckon that time is no object. When I spoke to some managers they informed me that it was impossible to change the habits of national heritage. That may be so, but my idea is that the reformation should begin with the men in charge. First-class organisers and good foremen could lick the young men into shape in a few years. The older generation must be left to finish in their own style. It would be a loss of time to try to reform them. In the young men, especially the Technical College students, lies the material by which the commercial and economic standard of Japan can be raised if properly trained. It is at any rate essential that the Japanese get out of the go-as-you-please that seems universal at the present time. I was struck by contrasts in industrial conditions in remote parts of the country. In some places I saw women almost naked making the most beautiful silk fabric in places no better than a stable and within a mile of the most elaborate modern factories. I was astonished to see the quality of the work done by these poor women and the conditions under which they worked. There is much that is admirable in Japanese factories, and in not a few articles they occupy a pre-eminent position in the world's markets. They are very keen on increasing their trade with Australia, and there is a splendid market in Japan for many of Australia's products."

PERRY CASE.

DR. MEADE'S EVIDENCE.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The inquiry into allegations of cruelty towards Gunner Perry by Dr. Meade, at the base hospital, was continued to-day.

Dr. Meade, referring to the use of the electric battery, said it was used six times, but never on Perry's eyes or tongue. When the battery was used Perry moved his legs freely, and on one occasion, when a strong current was used for 10 seconds, he said, "I will apologise; I can walk." The battery was then stopped, and witness told him to get up and walk, and he slipped out of bed and stood upright without help. After that he said, "No; I can't walk," and got into bed again. Once more the battery was applied, and he got up and walked up and down the balcony, and afterwards walked about the hospital continually. In answer to Mr. Wolfe, who appeared for Perry, Dr. Meade said that Perry was not suffering from hysteria. He was an impostor, and was in the pink of condition and health.

POLITICAL SLANDER CASES.

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

Mr. Justice Cussen to-day, in the Practice Court, assented to an application by the defendant, James Spencer, of Evansford, in the slander actions instituted by the Prime Minister (Mr. Fisher) and Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) that the cases should be heard together before the one jury.

RECRUITING.

STATE CAMPAIGN.

NEW ORGANISATION.

None of the speakers taking part in the recruiting campaign which will be inaugurated in the State on Monday will be paid for his expenses. This definite statement was made in a circular issued yesterday by Mr. Webster, M.P., organiser of the Federal War Committee.

Mr. Webster, in the course of his circular, says:—

"Realising that the first campaign, though laudable, was hurried and somewhat spasmodic, and not so effective as the efforts put forward deserved, the Federal War Committee have decided, in conjunction with the respective States, to organise a systematic and thorough appeal to the manhood of all classes in every State of Australia, beginning with the northern and north-western sections of New South Wales, on October 11. It is our hope that the press will unreservedly throw in its weight and influence to make known that the nation needs the best service of its sons to meet the relentless foe in Europe. Would you kindly say that none of the men taking part in this campaign will be paid for their services? This is to be a test of the volunteer system, and the Federal War Committee neither take nor give payment for service at such a time, and for such a cause.

"We shall be pleased to have the co-operation of all patriots in arranging the meetings, securing halls, advertising, etc., whilst means of conveyance to take speakers to the places allotted them will, I hope, be cheerfully offered by those able to render such service. The war committees hereby appeal to the press, the public, and the politician to throw themselves whole-heartedly into this appeal, upon which the future of our continent may depend. The effective speakers will doubtless offer their services freely, and if the joint efforts of all results in furnishing a steady stream of recruits to take the place of those who have done their duty, then all will feel proud of having played their part."

DEBATE IN PARLIAMENT.

MR. HOLMAN'S HELP.

In the Legislative Assembly last night Mr. Crawford asked the Premier if there was a Parliamentary recruiting committee, and if the members were to be invited to assist in the new recruiting campaign.

The Premier said that an invitation would be sent to every hon. member requesting his co-operation in the recruiting campaign. Until the commencement of this week there were some difficulties in regard to the State section of the campaign. The co-operation of the State Parliament and the Federal Parliament was now secured. The campaign committee which had been mentioned was a committee of the State Parliament, with two members of the Federal War Council.

Mr. John Storey wanted to know if it was the desire of the Federal Parliament that the State members should assist in the work of recruiting.

The Premier said that there was a definitely expressed desire on the part of the Federal Minister for Defence that there should be a recruiting campaign in New South Wales. The recruiting committee was started in the House about 10 days ago. The arrangement at present was that about 10 Federal members, representing the State, would assist in the campaign. The difficulties to which he had alluded having been removed, it was now practicable to invite members to join in the campaign, which would be conducted without the adjournment of the House for that purpose.

Mr. Haynes asked the Premier would it not be better to have a continuous and systematic appeal to the people instead of a spasmodic appeal of the kind proposed.

The Premier replied that recruiting was a new problem, and personally he was very far from satisfied with the results achieved so far or the methods which had been adopted, but whether any better method could be devised on the voluntary basis was a question open to very considerable doubt, and he could only convey to the House the request of the Minister for Defence, that a recruiting campaign should be inaugurated in New South Wales, and that as many patriotically-minded citizens as possible should participate in it.

The Premier, referring to the march of recruits from Gilgandra to Sydney, said, in reply to Mr. Arkins, that the march was really a Federal matter, coming under the Defence Department. It was recognised as a valuable recruiting idea by the State Government, and officers of the Tourist Department had been instructed to assist in making the arrangements. The plan was that a body of recruits would walk from Gilgandra and pick up other recruits on the march. He hoped that like the snowball the body of Gilgandra recruits would increase as it rolled towards the city. (Cheers.)

NOBLER CAREERS.

YOUTHS IN MINES.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Thursday.

In a memorandum to the Inagahua Mine and Dredge Employees' award, the Arbitration Court observes that it has not made any provision for the employment of youths, as requested by the employers. These youths, to be suitable for the work, would require to be between 19 and 21 years of age, and also to be strong and active. The Court did not think it should offer any inducement to youths of this description to stay at home and follow the inglorious occupation of raking stone down a shute, when a nobler career was open to them in the service of their King and country.

FROM THE FRONT.

SOLDIERS' LETTERS.

FIGHT FOR LONE PINE.

HEAVY LOSSES.

We take the following from a letter, dated August 19, 1915, written by Lance-corporal A. Simpson, 2nd Battalion, to his mother, who resides in Pyalla-street, Northbridge:—

"To relate it from the first. On August 6 we got ready, after a supposed 24 hours' spell, to charge with fixed bayonets the Turkish trenches, which were about 120 yards from us, with a good barbed wire entanglement in front of them. The artillery informed us that they could not burst the barbed wire, but they could break the overhead cover of the trenches. I got a pair of good wire cutters and a couple of bombs, and I was ready. Our company was front line, followed by C. Company. We had a secret trench underground 30 yards in front of our firing-line, and this is where we got out from. The Turks must have thought us mushrooms, the way we sprang up out of the ground—we seemed to come from nowhere. We sat under the ground from 4.30 till 5.30 p.m., while a heavy bombardment went on. At 5.30 the order was given to charge. Then we got out and ran for their trenches. The artillery had blown their barbed wire away, but had not broken their trenches in, and when we reached the first trench, where we were supposed to stop, we found ourselves being slaughtered, and could not get into the trench, so simply had to go on. I shot a Turk here who was firing up through a hole in the ground, but not before he had done his damage.

"The Turks had arranged their machine-guns on their second trench, and as we came up over the first trench they simply mowed our boys down, but only for a couple of minutes, and we had five of their guns and the dead Germans who had been working them and a million and a quarter rounds of ammunition.

"I got down in the second trench. By this time the artillery was playing a big part, but what Turks were alive had flown. We found our way through communication trenches until the third trench was reached, and we got the Turks with the bayonet. Although I did not get the pleasure of putting the bayonet through one, I accounted for four of them. Their artillery ere this was simply terrible, and they shelled us out of that trench. I came back up the trench, and the major saw me, and asked me to go with him to bomb some Turks out of the first trench. I lit one bomb and threw it in with them, and the second one I threw on top, and when the dust cleared I poked my bayonet round the corner, and had a look; one was dead, another wounded in the head, and the other in the neck. I took them prisoners. I should have killed them, for they shot nine of our boys dead, but I could not do it in cold blood. I went back; it was now dark; and still fighting hard, with the consistent flash of the bursting shells, which made it a fair hell.

"We fought on all through the night with bombs, and, my word, the way the Turks use them! They are the most deadly weapon of the lot. They throw them in 20 and 30 at a time, all along the trench, and knocked the men about terribly. They bombed us out of the trench twice, but we got them out with our own bombs. We fought for 48 hours, and I could only find one chap out of our company; so the pair of us threw ourselves down amongst the supports, and had about three hours' sleep, then had to fight on again.

"We got relieved on the 8th; we had no officers, and only one sergeant and myself, so all the work fell on us. I made up my mind if relief did not come I was going to the doctor to get away; so I went to him with a temperature of 103; hence I am on my way to England. I was on about three boats, until they finally lobbed me on this boat, and she's a beauty. She's more like a building than a ship. We can go where we like. Up on the promenade deck, where my abode is, there are no port-holes from the cabins; they have box-frame windows, and instead of cabins they are more like rooms with a couple of beds in them, and all along the side are big lift-up windows.

"I forgot to tell you we got about 600 to 800 Turks, but what our casualties are goodness only knows, but they were four deep in the trenches, our boys for days walking over them. The part we took was the Lone Pine.

"Well, we were all anxious to see the wonderful Gibraltar. We called in there at 11.30 a.m. It's a wonderful rock all right, towering high up, with gun positions all over it, and here and there made up with concrete. On the back side are all the barrack buildings, and to the left of that again is a pier running out, and beyond that is a fair-sized town, with pretty decent sort of buildings. It only goes to show what a wonderful nation England is.

"Arrived in Southampton 5.30 a.m., under escort of two destroyers for two days; disembarked at 11.30, and entrained for Clapham Junction, 80 miles up. Well, it's the prettiest trip I have ever been by train in my life. When we arrived at Clapham Junction we got into motor cars, and drove to the hospital, about half a mile distant. The hospital I am in is called the Second London General, Wandsworth. Don't write here, as there is nothing wrong with me, and I shall be gone shortly I suppose. It is a big hospital, with nice nurses."

YOUNG HERO ON HOSPITAL SHIP.

The following letter, written from Ghezireh Palace, on August 17, has been received by Mr. John Wise, of Turner's-buildings, Hunter-street, from his brother, R. G. Wise:—"Our casualties were appalling in the last attack, and I know now what comforts are for the wounded, and how much they are appreciated. I only had six weeks in bed, and that was enough. Now I can get about; it is a treat, and I will soon be able to dispense with the crutches.

"There was a young hero of 18 died gloriously on the hospital ship. Surely no man could wish to die better—shot through the ankle, he was all right for a couple of days, but one morning he woke up to find his leg black—mortification. When the doctor saw it he shook his head, and this 18-year-old lad said: 'I know I can't live, doctor, but how long will I last?' The doctor replied, 'No; you cannot live; you will be dead at 3 o'clock.' And all he said was: 'Well, it can't be helped; I've done my bit, anyway.' He was so cheerful, and these simple words moved the doctor, so that he couldn't speak, and the nurses had to go away, and the men about had tears in their eyes. Just before he died at 1 o'clock he said: 'Good-bye, lads, I'm off.' One might well be proud to be an Australian when they can die like that."

The writer of the letter has since advised by cable that he is returning, and left Egypt on September 16.

ON LEMNOS ISLAND.

We take the following extracts from a letter dated August 22, just received by Mr. S. E. Lees, from his only son, Corporal Grafton Lees, who is with No. 3 General Hospital, A.I.F., on Lemnos Island:—

"The news we get here is very meagre, and often conflicting regarding the war. Even here we know very little of the position and prospects. The wounded do not seem to know any more than ourselves, but they tell some very thrilling tales of reverses and victories. They are a wonderfully patient and cheerful lot of fellows. Knowing the privations and trials they have gone through, and the suffering many of them still have, their spirit is marvellous. It is altogether a remarkable experience to go through even here, and it makes a fellow wonder that life is ever regarded as dear, knowing the awful wholesale slaughter that goes on daily so near and further afield, when we daily and nightly hear the roar and rattle of death-dealing machines, and, when dark, see the flashes of shrapnel shells as they burst, and the guns that discharge them.

"Daily we see 'sweepers' teeming with men in khaki leaving for this hell, cheering England and King, full of stern determination to do or die; most I suppose do both, for you doubtless know how heavy the casualties have been on both sides. They sing a ringing 'No' when someone calls, 'Are we downhearted.'

"We are hoping that there will be some definite and conclusive business done in these parts before the winter; if not, we shall probably put the rest of the year in here; otherwise, perhaps, to Constantinople, or France, or England, or elsewhere.

"Ever since landing we have had to bivouac; not tents enough to shelter us yet. The patients absorb them as fast as we get them up. There are a great number of these military base hospitals here. Everywhere we look is a camp of some sort, either for our purpose or for reinforcements. Egyptian navvies, Indian, French, and English soldiers, and sundry Greek villages are on the shores of this magnificent and vast harbour. It is ideal for shipping shelter, and deep water. Ships of all Allied nationalities fill it to crowding. Transports, war subs., hospital ships, destroyers, pinnaces, lighters, etc. One would imagine, and probably rightly, that the world's social future hung on what we see here and know to be at the Narrows, and hereabouts, and the result would soon be flashed round to many rejoicing peoples, whose prosperity, and, perhaps, existence, depend upon it."

REFERENDUM.

OPPOSITION LEADER'S VIEWS.

POLITICAL RETROSPECT.

Mr. Joseph Cook, M.P., has supplied the following statement:—

The campaign for the referendum has already begun in earnest, judging by the lengthy report in your columns of the meeting of the Political Labour League, which was attended by over 200 delegates, and specially exhorted by Mr. Hughes. There are apparently two recruiting campaigns to be carried through at the same time, one for soldiers, and one for the referendum. Both sides are to meet and fraternise in the closest comradeship for one of the campaigns, while in the other they are to be separated as wide as the poles are asunder. No one has more concisely shown the incongruity of this situation than the Attorney-General himself a year ago. When getting in some of his slim work before the election, he said:—

"For the time being there is but one issue—the war. But upon this we are united. We cannot criticise. When, then, remains? How can both parties show a united front? How can Mr. Cook consult us, and we co-operate with him, and at the same time go on with party warfare? We cannot at once have party warfare and united action. We cannot go upon the platform and denounce the Government, and at the same time work with the Government. The choice lies between party and the welfare of the nation."

Yesterday Mr. Hughes, while declaring that the Referendum proposals were not party questions, denounced Liberals all round as being the friends of the exploiters and trusts.

"I want specially to lay one of Mr. Hughes's ghosts before the campaign is entered upon. I propose to make him lay it himself. He has consistently in the public press and elsewhere sought to make it appear that we wished my party to remain in power during the war, and that he pledged his party to support us as a 'Committee of Public Safety.' Unfortunately for Mr. Hughes, quite a lot of things have been said in Parliament since then, both by himself and by the Prime Minister. I mention this matter because your journal in its excellent leader yesterday has fallen under the same mis-impression. You say, as most people believe, that Mr. Hughes desired to form a 'National Cabinet.'"

"Here is what the Attorney-General has to say on that point (Hansard, pages 4204-5, June 18, 1915):—

"'Honourable members do not seem to realise what it was that I proposed. We did not propose a coalition. We never contemplated it. We would not have agreed to it.'

"Here Mr. Hughes himself makes it quite clear that no such step as a 'National Cabinet' was either contemplated or possible.

"Then Mr. Hughes says he offered support to keep us in power. But was he entitled to make that offer for his party? Here again Mr. Hughes tells us in 'Hansard' that he was not; and if not, of what value at all was the proposal in view of a perfectly evenly divided House of Representatives and a strongly preponderating Labour Senate.

"Let us refer again to the records and see what offer actually was made by Mr. Hughes, and the attitude of the Prime Minister.

"This is the authority on which Mr. Hughes made his offer. 'Hansard,' p. 4205, June 18, 1915:—

"'I was speaking at that time on behalf, at any rate, of the Labour party of New South Wales, and after consultation with the executive of the party there, and after notification to my leader. . . . I want to tell the House what I did. I made the offer after the executive of the State of New South Wales had considered and approved it. . . . I did not pretend to speak for anybody except those I represented. . . . I spoke as I felt, and on behalf of the New South Wales executive and members of the party. . . . I spoke, too, after approval of the leaders in South Australia and Tasmania.'

"What was the attitude of the Prime Minister towards this offer of the Attorney-General? He repudiated it, and dissociated himself and the Government from the suggestion. The Prime Minister, replying to my references to the offer of the Attorney-General, said ('Hansard,' p. 175, October 14, 1914):—

"'I was entrusted by my party with the duty of announcing its programme, and my speeches alone should be quoted by the right honourable gentleman in dealing with that programme.'

"And again on June 18 ('Hansard,' p. 4187) he said:—'I was never consulted. The Attorney-General can deal with that matter quite effectively when he speaks.'

"So that, on the one hand, we have the Prime Minister protesting that he was not consulted in the matter, the Attorney-General, on the other, stating that he made the offer 'after notification to his leader,' and at his request.

"Here, then, is revealed in all its verisimilitude the trick of the last election. It succeeded in its purpose. But with these facts now clearly before the public the hoax should hardly be repeated.

"The further sophistry that the Referendum is not a party measure can be dealt with at another time. I hope later to make the records of the Labour Conference in Adelaide lay bare this hollow pretence. Meantime, let me set down the facts concerning the last election. They are these:—

"1. The offer of Mr. Hughes was not contemptuously 'turned down.' It was deliberately and regretfully turned down, after the fullest consideration, because there was no constitutional or practical way of turning it up. The Parliament was dead, and could not be made alive, and even if it had been possible to resurrect that Parliament, which heaven forfend, it could not have been made a workable Parliament in any possible circumstance or for any possible purpose.

"2. Mr. Hughes made an offer which he now himself says was not an offer on behalf of the party, but only with the approval of the executive of one State. All the while his leader 'lay low' in the northern latitudes, and said not a word.

"3. Nothing daunted, the Attorney-General essays to repeat his legerdemain. With the facts before them, will the public be gulled again?"

CASUALTIES.

SWEDE'S DEATH.

The death of Martin Systrom, 69 years of age, a native of Sweden, lately residing at Handsworth, Tryon-road, Lindfield, has been reported to the City Coroner. It is reported that on August 26 deceased called at a fish shop in Hunter-street, kept by Nicholas Acglay, and asked permission to go into the yard to get some scraps from the garbage-tin. His request was refused, and an altercation ensued, during which Systrom received a cut on the left elbow. He was put out of the shop, after which he reported the matter at No. 4 police station. From there he was taken to Sydney Hospital, where a stitch was inserted in his wound. He was then allowed to go home. On September 1 deceased called again at the institution, when his arm was found to be septic. He was admitted, and died there on October 2, after developing pneumonia. A post-mortem examination was conducted yesterday by the Government medical officer, Dr. A. A. Palmer, who attributed the cause of death to blood-poisoning.

WOMAN STRUCK BY TRAM.

Poisonous fumes overcame Harry Edwing, a labourer, employed at Alex. Cohen and Co.'s, Phillip-street, while he was working there about half-past 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The Civil Ambulance conveyed the injured man, who resides in Golden Grove-street, Redfern, to Sydney Hospital.

CLOTHING FOR TROOPS.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The whole of the mills of the Commonwealth have been organised since January last for the manufacture of the cloth, cord, flannel, and blankets required for the use of the troops. Further arrangements have now been made, by which each of the mills will continue to manufacture the respective lines allotted to them up to the full output of their machinery until further notice. The cost involved amounts to £1,512,782. There is a definite understanding with each of the mill-owners, that they will continue their efforts entirely to the execution of orders from the Defence Department.

LABOUR COUNCIL.

WARM CRITICISM OF THE MINISTRY.

CENSURE MOTION DEBATED.

The Holman Government came in for sharp criticism at last night's meeting of the Labour Council of New South Wales. Mr. Sorensen, of the Tailors and Tailoresses' Union, initiated discussion by moving,—"That this council has no further confidence in the Holman Government owing to its failure to introduce industrial legislation, as proposed at the P.L.L. Conference in April last." Since Mr. Justice Heydon had allowed the unlimited employment of female labour the clothing trade had, he said, "gone to the dogs." Nothing could be expected from the Holman Government. Its members were frightened to do anything for fear of losing their jobs. If the council would now withdraw its support it would be acting in good time.

A Voice: "And bring in Wade?"

Mr. W. Cahill (Bricklayers) said the Government had failed them in almost every promise that had been made.

Mr. O'Reilly (Hairdressers) moved as an amendment,—"That Mr. Holman be invited to attend a meeting of the council and explain the Government's attitude in regard to industrial legislation."

Mr. W. O'Brien (Furniture Trades) opposed the motion. He said it was tantamount to declaring against a party that had placed this Government in power. The Minister for Labour and Industry should be written to.

Mr. O'Neill (Monumental Masons) produced one of Mr. Estell's promises in the shape of a Trades Union Bill. "I do not know," said Mr. O'Neill, "whether this bill was drafted by a Parliamentary draftsman or by an inmate of Callan Park; but it is a perfectly useless piece of paper."

Mr. E. J. Price (Tramway Employees) said the vital planks of the Labour platform had been ignored. A Labour Government must be a Labour Government more than in name only. He condemned the Government for its attitude in the matter of recruiting expenses. The council should have some propositions to put forward. He moved as a further amendment,—"That owing to the neglect of industrial matters as contained in the Labour platform, this council recommends the formation of a trades-union political party."

The chairman, Mr. W. O'Neill, ruled this further amendment out of order.

On the motion of Mr. A. Vernon, secretary of the United Labourers' Protective Society, the discussion was adjourned till Thursday next, when there will be a special summons meeting.

TEXTILE WORKERS' PROTEST.

At last night's meeting of the Labour Council of New South Wales complaint was made against the Minister for Defence, Senator Pearce, for ignoring the application of preference to unionists in regard to textile workers by knitting manufacturers in New South Wales.

Mr. J. McKenzie, secretary of the Textile Workers' Union, read the following letter from the Acting Secretary for Defence, Mr. T. Trumble, dated September 13:—

With reference to your communication of 23rd ult. relative to the inclusion of preference to unionists in the conditions of contract, I have to inform you that it is impracticable to comply with your request. It is noted that a firm discharged a number of hands, and that some were not re-engaged when work was again available, but it is not seen how the contractor's liberty of choice of employees can be interfered with, as long as the Wages Board award is complied with. If specific instances, supported by statutory declaration, can be given of this firm or its employees interfering with unionists getting employment elsewhere, inquiries will be made as to what can be done in the matter. As regards profits of manufacturers, the prices paid the mills are fixed by the department, and it is satisfied that the profits made are not excessive. It is pointed out that the courts are provided by law for improving the conditions of the workers, and it is suggested that action be taken accordingly.

On behalf of the Textile Workers' Union Mr. McKenzie moved the following: "That this council asks for action to be taken by the Minister for Defence, Senator Pearce, towards adhering to labour conditions of tender by knitting manufacturers at Alexandria and other places, and that all future contracts be strictly carried out in accordance with form A of contracts in clauses A, B, and C, with an added proviso for absolute preference to unionists."

Mr. Murray (Boilermakers) seconded the motion. If the union concerned were stronger Senator Pearce would never have taken up this attitude. It was a disgrace that female expert textile workers over 21 years of age should be receiving only 17s per week.

The motion was carried.

MUNITIONS MANUFACTURE.

Mr. C. Anderson, president of the Melbourne Eight-Hour Committee, Mr. Gray, the secretary, and Mr. C. Bennett, the president of the Trades Hall Council, Melbourne, were welcomed to the council.

Mr. Gray stated that the Federal Government should have taken over, at the outbreak of the war, all industries supplying munitions of war, instead of allowing local manufacturers to make extraordinary profits. Even now, he said, it was not too late for action to be taken.

ROYAL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

An immense audience attended the stately and martial concert given at the Town Hall last night by the Royal Philharmonic Society of Sydney. Granville Bantock's imposing version of the National Anthem, through which reverberates the roll of drums and the blare of trumpet fanfares, formed a fitting introduction to Emile Cammaert's patriotic ode, "Chantons, Belges, Chantons" ("Sing, Belgians, Sing"). Sir Edward Elgar's orchestral piece, entitled "Carillon," composed as an accompaniment to this poem, was first heard in London at a concert by the London Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Henri Verbrugghen, on December 7, 1914, though the Carillon itself was directed by the composer. On that occasion the poem was recited by the poet's wife, Mme. Tita Brand, and a little later by Mme. Rejane. Last night the music was finely conducted by Mr. Joseph Bradley, with Mr. Henri Staell as leader. The descending tetrachord upon which the composition is founded was first delivered by the bells alone, but afterwards it was repeated almost continuously to the end, frequently resembling a ground-bass. Mr. Lawrence Campbell, the music coming generally between the verses, delivered the impassioned appeal to the Belgian people with noble elocutionary effect. His pathos at the lines, "With branches of beech, of flaming beech, to the sound of the drum, We'll cover the graves of our children," was wonderfully touching in its sympathy with the change to a sad, soft weeping, which swept over the orchestral waves of harmony. Altogether, this complete union between Poetry and Music, and the sublimity of the sacrifice on the part of the brave Flemish people thus celebrated, created an indelible impression. Conductor and reciter were applauded with enthusiasm. The first part of the programme also included another war contribution, Gounod's "Gallia" (1871), beautifully rendered by the choir and orchestra, the former being especially at home in it through recent association with Miss Amy Castles. Last night's soloist was Miss Vera Tesma, whose unaffected style and purity of tone served her well until the finale "Jerusalem," with a big ensemble. This demanded a soprano of richer and more dramatic fibre.

After all this excitement, Sir Arthur Sullivan's cantata, "The Golden Legend," came hardly off, mainly owing to an almost entire lack of emotional warmth on the part of three of the soloists. Mr. Malcolm M'Eachern, indeed, was by nature perfectly equipped for the role of Lucifer, and in the earlier part of the work sang well "Behold it Here." At this point his weight and largeness of voice suggested a formidable Satanic power in keeping with a magical accompaniment of sprightly charm, in which piccolo, reeds, and pizzicato strings were prominent. The basso was not always certain of his music, however, and the big "piff-paff" solo failed of its full effect. Mr. Percy French, in the exacting tenor role of Prince Henry, was musicianly, having studied the text with care, and he rose to some show of spontaneity in the third scene. Miss Tesma and Miss Rubie Stella Henry, who both made first appearances with the Philharmonic, were not responsive to the touching situation between Ursula (contralto) and her daughter Elsie (soprano). Both artists, however, won a varying measure of acceptance in the more effective solo numbers. The choral singing in the unaccompanied "O Gladsome Light," with its crescendo of harmony to a fortissimo climax and subsequent subsidence, delighted the ear, and the male voices attained a massive effect in the Gregorian chant, the organ part to which on "foundation stops" was impressively rendered by Mr. Vern Barnett. The great choral and orchestral epilogue, "God sent His messenger, the rain," further sustained the reputation of the Philharmonic Society.

NURSE COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

At the inquiry to-day into the death of Catherine Elizabeth Cooper, 26, married, the Coroner returned a finding that death was due to infection after confinement, brought about by the criminal negligence of a nurse named Jemima Smith. He committed Smith for trial for manslaughter.

STATE SESSION.

RECRUITING EXPENSES.

NAMES DEMANDED.

GREATER SYDNEY BILL.

The greater part of last night's sitting of the Legislative Assembly was occupied with a discussion on the matter of the payment of expenses to some members who took part in the recruiting campaign. The Premier and the leader of the Opposition crossed swords over a request by Mr. Wade for the names of all the speakers who took part in the campaign, and he said if he could not get the information he would resign from the recruiting committee.

STATE FISH.

In reply to Mr. Fitzpatrick, it was stated that 54 boxes of gurnard, part of a large consignment recently received, were set aside at the Municipal Market by Inspector Fanning as unfit for food. There was an official dispute concerning the condemnation of some good fish along with a smaller quantity unfit for food, which was therefore not offered for sale. Mr. Fanning's resignation was withdrawn.

HOTEL CLOSING.

PREMIER RETICENT.

The leader of the Opposition had given notice to the Premier for last night in the Legislative Assembly of the following questions:—

In view of the resolution carried by this House in favour of the closing of hotels at 9 o'clock, will the Government introduce a bill this session to give effect to that resolution?

If the answer is "no," will the Government afford an opportunity to a private member to pass a bill through this House to give effect to such resolution?

The Premier deferred answering the questions.

RECRUITING EXPENSES.

Matters relating to members' expenses in connection with the recruiting campaign were touched upon by Mr. Fallick by way of a personal explanation. He said after the Premier's statement on the previous night he was told that he was one of the three Liberal members referred to as having put in a claim for expenses. He was astounded when he heard this, because he did not make any claim whatever. He interviewed the Premier, and was told that he was one of the three Liberal members referred to. "I can say," he proceeded, "that I was astounded and disgusted when I found my name included. I emphatically deny ever making such a claim, and I challenge the Government to produce a document with my name attached to it."

Proceeding, Mr. Fallick stated that on one occasion he was accompanied to one of his meetings by a returned soldier, who addressed the meeting, and who was instrumental in securing several recruits. The soldier asked him after the meeting if he could obtain his expenses, and he (Mr. Fallick) asked him to write them down and he would hand them in. This was done, and a voucher for 11s was handed in on behalf of the soldier by him. So far the expenses had not been paid. Had he known that there was going to be so much trouble he would have readily paid the expenses out of his own pocket.

The Premier said he readily accepted the statement made by Mr. Fallick, and assured him that he suffered no disparagement in any way by what had occurred.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. Hoskins moved the adjournment of the House for the purpose of calling attention to the payment to members of the House of expenses incurred in the recruiting campaign. It would have been far better, he said, had the Premier given the names of those members who had received their expenses. Last Wednesday week the Premier had mentioned during the Willoughby election that such payments would be made. The circular, in which it was stated that the expenses would be paid, was not received by him till after the campaign closed, and he at once wrote to the Premier that there was sufficient patriotism in him to do the recruiting work he had done for nothing. Surely members were entitled to make some sacrifice with thousands of noble men and women who were helping in the work, and should not ask for a few paltry shillings. Perhaps the two Liberal members who were now said to have taken expenses belonged to the Independent party. He thought the Premier was injuring the recruiting campaign by his attitude.

Mr. James expressed surprise at the attitude adopted by the Premier. In his opinion he could not see why members should not claim their expenses, because, in many cases, they went outside their own electorates. In view of this he could not understand why the Premier withheld the information, more especially as it was asked for by members of both sides of the House. He would strongly object to members being paid for their services in such a campaign, but he could not see why they should not be paid their out-of-pocket expenses.

The Premier said that the real sacrifice made by a public man in the recruiting campaign was first the sacrifice of time and the risk he ran at losing his popularity in undertaking such work. The attacks were most malicious.

Mr. Wade: Why did you refuse me as a member of the recruiting committee this morning the names of the speakers in the last campaign?

The Premier: My reason is obvious.

Mr. Wade: In that case it is useless for me to remain on the committee. If you will not answer one way or the other I will resign.

The Premier: I looked upon you as leader of the Opposition, and as such you are a member of the recruiting committee. As a member of the committee you are entitled to whatever information you require.

Mr. Wade: I want the names of members of both sides of the House who took part in the campaign.

The Premier: Members of the committee will no doubt get the information they need. They should obtain it as members of the recruiting committee, but if they need it for use on the floor of the House, and for the furtherance of party matters, it is another question.

Mr. Wade: If I cannot get it I am off the committee at once.

The Premier: All this anxiety about the names of members is nothing more than a party move.

Mr. Wade: You are using it for party purposes.

The Premier: When we went into this matter we did so in the belief that all party divisions had been sunk. I will not believe that again. There's nothing which can be done in this House which cannot be twisted for party purposes.

The debate was continued by Mr. Henley and Mr. Edden.

The debate was continued by Mr. Page, Mr. G. Cann, Mr. Cusack, Mr. Thrower, Mr. Bagnall, Mr. J. Perry, Mr. Haynes, Mr. Dooley, Mr. John Storey, Mr. Scobie, Mr. Cochran, Mr. Fitzpatrick, Mr. Waddell, Mr. Stuart-Robertson, and the motion was formally negatived after Mr. Hoskins had replied.

BILLS CARRIED.

The following measures were passed through their final stages, and referred to the Legislative Council:—The Trustees' Delegation of Powers, The State Coal Mines' Amending, and the Grafton and South Grafton Water Supply Administration bills.

GREATER SYDNEY BILL.

SECOND READING DEBATE.

The Minister in charge of Local Government, Mr. Griffith, began his second reading speech on the Greater Sydney bill in a thin House, no other Minister being present. He said that Sydney was the sixth largest city in the Empire, the annual rates collected in the area included in the bill amounting to £1,346,000. There were 53 local governing bodies in the metropolitan area, and none of them was strong enough financially to undertake the work which ought to belong to civic government in modern times.

Mr. Cohen called attention to the want of a quorum after the Minister had only been speaking a few minutes, and said it was a disgrace.

Mr. Griffith, continuing, when a quorum was obtained, said the approaches to Sydney from the hinterland were in a state that should bring the blush of shame to the cheek, and, until the Central Government came in and spent the money of the general taxpayers upon it, the state of Parramatta-road was a standing joke. They ought to have three or four great avenues leading in and out of Sydney, to connect it with the other parts of the State. He instanced the narrowness of Cook's River-road, and said it would be more in keeping in a Chinese city. There should be a main road from the city to Hornsby. In his remarks he wished to be understood not to be reflecting on the aldermen and councillors, who were doing their best under the most cruelly hampered conditions.

In reply to an interjection by the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Griffith said he thought that such things as State quarries and bakeries could be better undertaken by Greater Sydney than the State Government. The North Shore bridge was another of the great works that this Greater Sydney Government would be able to carry out.

THE FRANCHISE.

The only contentious part of the measure, which contained from 800 to 900 clauses, Mr. Griffith said, was that relating to the franchise. He contended that the Parliamentary franchise should be good enough for Greater Sydney.

Mr. Ball: There is a difference of opinion among your own party.

Mr. Griffith: I fancy all members of my party believe that the Parliamentary franchise is adequate, and that an adult citizen, who has been given and has accepted the responsibility of electing this and the Commonwealth Parliaments, should be given the other franchise as a matter of course. In the area covered by the bill there were 143,000 electors on the municipal roll, while there were 386,000 on the Parliamentary. The Sydney metropolitan Council would govern the whole area. The whole of the shires and municipalities were not to be dissolved in the metropolitan area, but would be divided into an inner and outer zone. In the inner zone 24 councils would cease to exist more or less immediately, while those in the outer zone would continue in power, but the Greater Sydney Council would at once take over the responsibility for certain things, such as arterial roads, health inspection, regulation of buildings and subdivisions, town planning, control of public markets, electric lighting and (later on) gas supply.

Mr. Cohen asked why should Petersham and Ashfield be included in the inner zone, while Burwood and Strathfield, which had a community of interest with them, were in the outer zone.

Mr. Griffith said that if in committee it was desired to include in the inner zone the strip of country including these two and other places, he would have no objection, but he knew that the councils concerned objected to come into the inner zone.

Mr. Cohen: So do the councils who are in it. (Laughter.)

Mr. Griffith said he should explain that the inner zone would be divided into two parts, one which would come under the operation of the Act immediately, and the other later on.

MAYOR'S SALARY.

The bill provided that the salary of the mayor of the metropolitan area to be constituted would be £1000 a year, apart from his expenses for entertainment. He would be elected for three years. Regarding the payment of aldermen, a referendum would be taken, and, if the people preferred to pay them, he had fixed the salary of aldermen at £250 a year.

Mr. Levy: Why is that the only question to be decided by referendum?

Mr. Griffith said he thought there was no doubt that the mayor and town clerk should be paid salaries. The referendum as to the payment of aldermen would be taken once and for all. The council would have charge of the beaches, control of public halls and buildings, and would have a vast number of general powers. It was proposed to create a civic planning commission, which would be a board of experts, three to be appointed by the Governor and three by the council, so that the commission would be an independent one. It would advise the council on new buildings, roads, and the general lay-out of the metropolitan area. It would be a permanent body, and the members would be paid fees. It would have powers to locate industries, and enable citizens to segregate industries on a scientific basis. They had power to create municipal housing areas, and municipal trading would be a large feature of the council's operations, and power was given to buy out lighting companies.

Mr. James: And the gas companies?

Mr. Griffith: Yes. The council would have power, if it liked, to buy a coal mine to supply its wants.

The second reading was adjourned, on the motion of Mr. James.

The House was sitting at a late hour.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

PAYMENT OF RECRUITING SPEAKERS.

Mr. Garland said he desired to make a personal explanation about a statement made by the Premier in the Assembly with regard to the expenses of those who took part in the recent recruiting campaign. The Premier stated that a member of the Legislative Council had charged £7 16s, and he had no doubt that he was the member referred to. He attended meetings at Coonamble, Dubbo, Wellington, Forbes, Parkes, and Orange, and owing to the time of the running of the trains it was absolutely impossible to fulfil all the engagements by train; and at certain stages of the work he undertook, he was furnished by the local recruiting authorities, under arrangements made by the Government, with motor cars to meet engagements which could not otherwise have been carried out. Upon his return to Sydney he received a communication from a motor owner in one part of the country, asking whether he thought the Government would pay for the use of the cars that had been engaged. He immediately wrote to Mr. Harkness, secretary to the Premier's department, who replied, stating that the Government would pay for the use of the cars. He never received a shilling from the Government for his expenses. (Hear, hear.) He paid his own expenses as he always did, and made no charge whatever for his services. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Farrar said he was one of those who placed his services at the disposal of the Government in the campaign. He was informed that he would be paid his out of pocket expenses, but he declined to make any charge for his services.

A TESTATOR'S FAMILY NEEDS.

Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald moved for leave to bring in a bill to assure to the widow or widower and family of a testator an adequate maintenance from the estate of such testator, and to amend the law relating to the guardianship of infants.

The motion was agreed to, and the bill was introduced and read the first time.

GERMANS AND NATURALISATION.

PUBLIC SERVICE AND THE GERMANS.

Sir Joseph Carruthers moved,—(1) That, in the opinion of this House, the naturalisation of Germans and others of enemy race is not a sufficient guarantee of the loyalty of such persons to the Empire in time of war; (2) that the State laws ought to be amended so as to provide that certain privileges which such naturalised persons now enjoy in common with other citizens should be suspended until such persons establish in manner to be prescribed by law their full and unqualified loyalty to the Empire; (3) that rigid action should be taken to prevent any person of enemy race or origin holding any public position unless with a special certificate issued after due inquiry by the Governor-in-Council; (4) that, in the opinion of this House, it is not compatible with public safety in this time of war to permit any enemy to be free and at large in the State.

He denounced what he termed the horrible apathy among the people, who did not seem to realise the serious danger they were in from German espionage and hostile acts. He was of opinion that naturalisation was no guarantee of loyalty to Great Britain, and more drastic steps were necessary to deal with Germans in our midst, who carried on trades or were in our Public Service. It was essential, he said, that ample measures should be taken to ensure public security.

The Vice-President of the Executive Council said there was no difference between Sir Joseph Carruthers and himself on the subject to which his resolutions referred. He thought that naturalised Germans should be interned, and unnaturalised Germans or Austrians should have no privileges whatever. (Hear, hear.) But, at the same time, there was a danger of raising a hue and cry against persons with foreign names as being enemies of Great Britain. There was a disposition in the community to regard everyone with a foreign name as being an enemy. There was no doubt that the people of this country did not realise the perilous position in which they were placed, and he believed this was due to some extent to the ridiculous nature of the censorship exercised, by which victories were placed to the credit of the Allies which were really futile or only partially successful. No one doubted the necessity of more drastic steps being taken to deal with the enemies of Great Britain, but some discrimination should be observed in regard to Germans who had for years been naturalised here, and who had married Australians and brought up families. Suspected men should be dealt with in no half-hearted way, but each case should be dealt with on its merits.

With regard to clauses 2 and 3 of the resolution, they involved matters which deserved every consideration, and the onus of proof of loyalty must be placed upon German residents. The Government, however, was doing its duty, and we must be careful that we did not in a spirit of frenzy do an injustice to those who might be thoroughly loyal.

Dr. Creed said he had taken every opportunity of pointing out the position which would arise owing to the enterprise of Germans in competing with Great Britain in trade throughout the world. In 1889 he moved a resolution in that House recommending the repeal of the 15th section of the Constitution, and he dealt with the position in 1902; and in 1903 he wrote about it to the "Morning Post," London. In 1909 he also pointed out what would be the conditions of Australia if Germany obtained the upper hand over Great Britain and secured commercial supremacy.

Mr. Garland congratulated Sir Joseph Carruthers upon moving the resolution, and said that the Vice-President of the Executive Council was also to be congratulated upon seeing his way to practically state that he was in accord with them. We had arrived at a stage when party differences should be set aside, when party wrangling should cease, and all should unite in the interests and security of the Empire. (Hear, hear.) Unfortunately, we had had more talk than action. He thought that the representative of the Government was too sensitive of the feelings of our opponents. In a struggle like this, where our national existence was at stake, we ought not to deal with this matter lightly—(hear, hear)—but should take complete steps to ensure our protection from our enemies. (Hear, hear.) He would draw no discrimination between naturalised Germans and those who were not naturalised.

Colonel Mackay said he could not conceive of naturalised Germans being trusted under any conditions whatever.

Mr. Farrar said that no one could have done his work from every honest standpoint in this matter better than the Premier. At the same time, the resolutions would have the effect of clearing the atmosphere and remove misunderstanding, and he hoped that all the leading men of the community would act together on this important question. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Gormly said it was about time that some check was placed upon German disloyalty, and he thought that the Government had not done what they should have done administratively on the matters referred to.

The resolutions were agreed to on the voices.

The House rose at 8.55 p.m. till Wednesday next.

DISGRACEFUL SCENE.

TRADES HALL COUNCIL.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

When the Trades Hall Council met to-night a motion was moved, that a letter expressing the council's sympathy be sent to the relations of the late Constable M'Grath, who was killed in an encounter with burglars at the Trades Hall on Friday last; that a letter be forwarded to the Chief Commissioner of Police, conveying their strong appreciation of the bravery of the police; and that the meeting adjourn as a mark of respect to the memory of Constable M'Grath.

The motion was agreed to, but immediately the chairman adjourned the meeting the representatives of the Carters and Drivers' Union shouted: "More sharp practices." One member of this union said they had voted on that part of the motion referring to the sending of the letters. Members of the council then filed out of the chamber, and over the spot where M'Grath was shot a heated altercation arose, during which one of the representatives of the Carters and Drivers' Union, who had been remonstrated with for his conduct, challenged some of the other members to go outside and fight. Other members intervened, however, and the scene ended.

WHEAT AND FLOUR.

ONLY SIXTEEN DAYS' SUPPLY.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

A census of the quantities of wheat and flour held in Victoria on the evening of September 27 was recently undertaken by the Price of Goods Board. It showed that on that date there were only 80,953 bushels of wheat and 4462 tons of flour, estimated to represent 16 days' supply. The Minister for Agriculture (Mr. Hutchinson) said to-day that with the Government importations Victoria would be fairly well supplied until the end of November. The department had communicated with all the other States with a view to ascertaining whether further supplies could be obtained if desired.

RETURNED SOLDIERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The statement made by returned soldiers who have just arrived that wounded men were given the deck to camp and sleep upon, whilst the cabins remained locked up and unoccupied is, to the minds of many citizens, simply appalling. These men volunteered to defend their country, and the best available is surely their due. Gross callousness was displayed when the men returned from Rabaul; and sick soldiers were badly treated.

Later on Mr. R. B. Orchard aroused public indignation against the authorities for their want of organisation at Liverpool. How can successful recruiting go on if the military authorities do not display greater consideration, and establish greater efficiency in respect to the requirements of the men? The public will want to know why the deck of the steamer is considered good enough for wounded soldiers, whilst the cabins are closed up? Is the statement true? If so, what is the explanation?

The public are generous. If a request is made money flows in. Why are the military so callous in attention to the needs of our men? The civilians of the Commonwealth, both men and women, would willingly give free service in work and organisation to the military if called upon; but something is wrong when so many cases of unnecessary hardship are heard of in connection with the soldiers.

I am, etc.,
ARTHUR A. C. COCKS.

MONOPOLY LEGISLATION.

BRISBANE, Thursday.

Mr. D. F. Denham, ex-Premier of Queensland, has received the following cablegram from Sir J. A. Cockburn, chairman of the Australian Chamber of Commerce in London:—"Financial and insurance circles greatly perturbed over the proposed monopoly legislation. Do not forget these powerful concerns are large investors in Australia, and influential supporters of Government issues."

BORDER RAILWAYS.

JOINT ROYAL COMMISSION.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

An Order in Council, appointing a joint Royal Commission, representing New South Wales and Victoria, to inquire into the question of border railway connection, has been agreed to by the State Executive. The Order agrees to the appointment of the Commission as follows:—Messrs. Barnes, M.L.A., Victoria (chairman), and Messrs. Hicks and Melville, M's.L.C., and J. W. Billson, Solly, and Toutcher, M's.L.A. (Victoria); Messrs. Dick, Travers, M's.L.C., and Hall, McGarry, Millard, and Nicholson, M's.L.A. (N.S.W.).

PRICE OF HAMS.

The Necessary Commodities Control Commission has come to a decision in regard to the price of Christmas hams cured in New South Wales, but as the fixing of prices for hams imported into the State is not to be considered until Monday next, it was thought undesirable to publish the decision at present. In all probability an announcement will be made on Monday.

Mr. Garlick promised to bring the matter under the notice of the Minister.

AMUSEMENTS.

"KULTURED WAR."

A somewhat realistic sketch, "Kultured War"—depicting with power that phase of excesses in war which will probably make the names of Liege and Louvain by-words in history, was presented by Mr. Walter Bentley at the Repertory Theatre last night as a stimulus to recruiting. In a little speech at the close of the performance, Mr. Bentley emphasised the important part that the stage could play in encouraging enlistment, and announced that he had in his studio a dozen more such examples of realism, which he intended to produce. Interest in the first piece was sustained by a philosophical conversation on the ethics of violation between General Dorne, in command of portion of the invading army, and his wife, Hilda, who has joined him unexpectedly at the front. The former holds to the principle that war is war, and that men are men, and brutally announces that what he does not know of he cannot condemn. His wife appeals to him for an order prohibiting excesses in the name of universal womanhood, and threatens that if it is not complied with she will have no hesitation in handing herself over to a former rival of her husband. The order being given, exceedingly dramatic complications ensue, resulting in a powerful climax. Though necessarily revolting in character, the realism is kept within bounds, and the anonymous author may be congratulated on a gripping piece of work. The honours of the acting were shared by Miss Ida Gough, as the General's wife, and Mr. Walter Bentley as the Chief of the General Staff. Miss Gough was at her best in the [illegible] for safety for the captured women, and there was a touch of grim humour about Mr. Bentley's [illegible]. Others playing were Miss Ruth Williams, Miss [illegible] Dougherty, and Mr. William Holmes, sen. Others whose names appeared on the programme included the Guardella Brothers, Messrs. Malcolm [illegible], Eugene Osipoff, and Maurice F. Price.

EASTERN REVUE FOR SOLDIERS.

As the result of the successful variety entertainment and eastern revue, organised and stage-managed by Mrs. Gordon Lowe, on October 1 and 2 at the Repertory Theatre, a sum of [illegible] is being handed over to the Red Cross branch dealing with help for the blinded soldiers.

STOCKS AND SHARES.

A fair amount of business was recorded on 'Change yesterday, with values mostly satisfactory, for in the majority of cases they were either a little better, or were unaltered. In two instances only were the prices regarded a shade on the easy side.

Variations in values were as follow:—

MUNICIPALITIES AS TRADERS.

At the council meeting of the Sydney Chamber of Commerce, held yesterday, the electrical engineering sectional committee reported on a communication received from the Electrical Employers' Association of N.S.W., drawing attention to a resolution passed by the Local Government Conference, which asks for power to be given to municipalities to engage in the carrying out of installation work on consumers' premises, and the sale of fittings and apparatus, etc. The sectional committee recommended that the chamber should protest against municipalities engaging in the carrying out of installation work on consumers' premises, and the sale of fittings and apparatus; and support the Electrical Employers' Association in any reasonable efforts which may be made to this end. This recommendation was adopted by the council, which also affirmed "that this council deprecates the tendency of governing bodies to enter into competition with ratepayers and citizens in trading undertakings."

SOUTH BRITISH INSURANCE.

Two or more men are receiving incomes privately, also a partnership. Please say, have the income and wealth from the partnership business to be included in the individual return?

Each man sends in his income from all sources, including his share of the partnership profits), and his assets of all kinds (including the value of his share of the partnership). In addition, in a separate card, in column B, a return is made for the partnership.

The directors of the Royal Bank of Australia, Ltd., have decided, subject to audit, to recommend payment of a dividend for the half-year just closed at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, and to transfer to the reserve fund the sum of £5000, making it £245,000.

At the wool sales yesterday 6389 bales were offered, and 5134 bales were sold.

A strong market ruled for practically all descriptions of merinos, except wasty and burry parcels.

Crossbreds were in keen demand at extreme figures.

Acting on representations which have been made by firms abroad, the Chamber of Commerce has decided to establish an "oversea" membership list. The annual subscriptions payable by oversea members will be the same as in the case of country members.

A list of enemy firms at Hongkong now in process of liquidation may be inspected at the offices of the Chamber of Commerce.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

There was no improvement in the demand for jute fabrics yesterday. Both country and town buyers were looking for cheap parcels, and as none were forthcoming they stood off the market. Cornsacks in all positions were generally quoted at from 8/4 to 8/5 net to rails, but it is possible that business could have been done at 8/3 net. Bran bags were steady at from 7/10 to 7/11 net to rails. For woolpacks 2/10 and 2/11 net was wanted.

There was a good inquiry for most lines of heavy chemicals. Cream of tartar met with an improved demand. Small lots of 95 per cent. could not have been secured under 1/9. Parcels were, of course, available substantially under this figure. For distributing lots of 99 per cent. 1/10 was wanted. There was no change in the price of citric acid, which was quoted at from 3/3 to 3/6, according to the quantity ordered. Rosin was weaker. Parcels of "G" grade were to be had at £15 a ton. "N" grade was offered at £17. Stocks of sodas were still light. Caustic was well held at from £26 to £27 a ton. Bicarbonate was available at from 9/6 to 10/ per cwt.

Groceries and Eastern produce were firmly held. Tinned fish of every description was lightly stocked. Herrings in tomato sauce were unobtainable, but small lots of fresh herrings in 1lb tins were quoted at 9/. For ½lb tins 5/6 was asked. Sardines moved out freely at full rates. There was no improvement in the position of matches. The market was still over-supplied with Japanese safeties, which were available at cheap prices. Oatmeal in bulk was to be had at the proclaimed rates—flaked at £29, and plain at £27 a ton.

At Darling Harbour yesterday no wheat and 83 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

PRODUCE.

DAIRY.

Generally quiet trade was transacted in the dairy markets of Sussex-street yesterday. Butter consignments were about on a par with last week's corresponding arrivals, but the demand was not so active. Consequently the amount of produce on the floors seemed to be more. Bacon and cheese were practically unprocurable. Unsettled conditions ruled the Christmas ham trade. The Necessary Commodities Commission will confer with representatives of the trade on Monday next, and it is hoped that some definite arrangements will then be made. Pending a decision, no orders are being booked—a contrast to last year, when nearly all business had been entered up by this time. The price which merchants are asking the commission to allow them to charge is 1/4 per lb, or a halfpenny more than the corresponding figure last year.

The egg market showed no change. River and railway poultry showed little change.

Quotations were:—

FORAGE AND GRAIN.

Potatoes again met an extremely firm market, and, although in the majority of cases no change in prices was made yesterday, it was anticipated that tubers would be from £1 to £2 dearer on Monday. About 400 bags were forwarded from Tasmania in the Wakatipu. Onions were also firm at £8.

Tasmanian derrick straw was 10/ dearer at £6/10/ a ton. Grey peas were easier at from 7/ to 7/3 per bushel, but prime blues were steady at 10/6. Other grades of blues were almost neglected. South African maize met a steady market, and Java was more active. For large lots 4/4 per bushel was obtained, but for smaller retail lots prices reached 4/6. Oats sold better at unaltered rates. Local bran and pollard were both almost unprocurable, the mills having closed down for a day or so. Japanese bran, which is made from Manitoba wheat, and is said to be almost equal in quality to the local offal, was quoted at £3/10/ a ton. Japanese pollard attracted little attention.

Pending the inquiry into chaff prices, which was adjourned till Tuesday next, the proclamation in force is the original one of May 12. Wheaten and oaten chaff is rated on the basis of £3/10/ a ton on rails Sydney.

With 30,518 sheep, including lambs, listed for yesterday's sales, and 28,146 penned from 102 consignors on top of 24,242 head on Tuesday, the market was fairly well supplied. The consignments included one draft of 1250 and one of 1200, and three of 800, the balance being mainly in lots of 90 to 300 head. The weather was fine, but windy, and most of the sheep arrived in time to be classed and penned up prior to the opening of the sales. The pennings comprised all descriptions, woolly and shorn being forward in about equal proportions. Although merinos preponderated, there was a good representation of crossbreds. The merinos included a small proportion of prime and occasionally pens of extra prime ewes, but mainly comprised fair to useful trade quality wethers and ewes, both woolly and shorn. The crossbreds ranged from medium to odd pens of extra prime, with a very fair showing of good to prime, but generally the selection was on the plain side, and many lines of woolly reflected the dry conditions prevalent in parts of the State.

There was a very large attendance of buyers, including the usual metropolitan, suburban, and country trade, as well as the S.M.P. Company, and one or two operators from Victoria. The market during the morning lacked the animation of Tuesday last. Competition was dull, and values generally were weaker for the better qualities, while medium and plain descriptions were decidedly lower. Towards the middle sales and during the afternoon, biddings became brisk, and values firmed, especially for the better quality shorn; values generally, however, for other descriptions were /6 to 1/ per head lower.

Included in the principal sales of merinos was a draft of woolly wethers from W. H. Crouch (Condobolin) to 30/8; V. J. Holcombe (Burren) to 27/9; woolly merino ewes from Boolcarrol station (Wee Waa) to 30/3; and J. G. Gray (Balldale) to 30/. Among the shorn and short-wool merinos was a line of wethers from A. F. and L. Manchee (Binneguy) to 27/3, Iout Bros. (Warren) to 21/5, A. Gunn (Cathundral) to 23/, and show merino ewes from E. Jones (Nevertire) to 24/1. Included in the crossbreds was a line of woolly wether hoggets from W. H. Crouch to 29/9, wethers from J. Brown (Currabubula) to 32/, W. Scott (Bogan Gate) to 30/, J. Johnston (Trangie), hoggets to 33/6, W. O'Brien (Beanbri), wethers to 30/, and J. H. Thomas (Nyngan), shorn crossbred wethers to 27/7.

Quotations.—Prime woolly merino w and h 26/ to 28/, extra prime merino w and h 30/ to 32/, good woolly merino w and h 21/ to 24/, medium woolly merino w and h 15/, prime woolly merino e 23/ to 26/, extra prime woolly merino e 27/ to 30/, good woolly merino e 20/ to 22/, medium woolly merino e 14/ to 17/; prime woolly xbd w and h 29/ to 32/, extra prime woolly xbd w and h 33/ to 34/, good woolly xbd w and h 23/ to 26/, medium woolly xbd w and h 16/ to 19/, prime woolly xbd e 29/ to 30/, extra prime woolly xbd e 31/ to 33/, good woolly xbd e 21/ to 26/, medium woolly xbd e 15/ to 18/, prime shorn merino w 21/ to 23/, extra prime 24/ to 26/, good shorn merino w and h 16/ to 18/; medium shorn merino w and h 12/ to 14/6, prime shorn merino e 17/ to 18/, extra prime 20/ to 22/, odd pens to 24/1, good shorn merino e 15/ to 16/, medium shorn merino e 11/ to 14/, prime shorn xbd w 23/ to 25/, extra prime 26/ to 28/, good shorn xbd w 23/ to 25/, extra prime 26/ to 28/, good shorn xbd w and h 19/ to 20/, medium 15/ to 17/; prime shorn xbd e 20/ to 22/, extra prime 24/ to 26/, good shorn xbd e 16/ to 18/, medium shorn xbd e 14/ to 15/.

LAMBS.

A VERY FIRM TONE.

A fair supply was forward. All descriptions were in evidence, the bulk being suckers, with a sprinkling of woolly and shorn summer lambs. Although crossbreds preponderated, there was a very fair showing of merinos. The pennings comprised a capital representation of good to prime, and occasionally pens of extra prime, both suckers and lambs, with a moderate proportion of medium and light sorts. There was a strong demand for the better qualities, with a firmer tone; other descriptions being without change. A line of woolly crossbred lambs, from Boolcarrol Station, Wee Waa, sold to 3/11; P. Sullivan (Burren), to 22/1; C. C. Harris (Bugilbone), to 21/9; O. Turner (Burren), to 24/1; M. A. Todd (Wee Waa), to 20/3; and Kennedy Bros. (Come-by-Chance), shorn, to 23/9.

Quotations: Prime suckers, 18/ to 20/; extra prime suckers, 20/ to 22/6; good suckers, 15/6 to 17/; medium suckers, 10/ to 13/; prime woolly and short-wool lambs, 19/ to 21/; extra prime, 22/6 to 25/; good woolly and short woolled lambs, 16/ to 18/; medium, 10/ to 14/.

CATTLE.

WEAK OPENING SPEEDILY RECOVERED.

Out of 1807 cattle listed for yesterday's sales 1740 head were forward. The consignments representing 106 owners, came, principally from the northern, north-western, and Hunter River districts, with occasional lots from the west and south. The yardings comprised all descriptions, and included a sprinkling of useful quality to prime weighty bullocks, occasional yards of prime medium weights, and a moderate showing of prime handy weight bullocks and steers. Plain sorts, however, preponderated. The cows and heifers included a very fair proportion of good to prime and odd extra prime, with a moderate showing of medium and rough sorts. The yardings also included a few yards of calves and bulls. It was a fair average yarding.

There was a moderate attendance of buyers at the opening, and as the supply appeared to be sufficient for trade requirements the market opened to free competition, with values, especially for heavy bullocks, in buyers' favour. As sales progressed more buyers were present, competition became keen, and values improved even above the best rates of Tuesday last; heavy bullocks, as well as the lighter descriptions, being in strong request.

Included in the principal sales was a draft from Midkin station (Moree), 4 bullocks selling to £34/10/, avg £30/13/9, 15 to £23/5/, avg. £23/1/8, and 19 cows to £27/15/ avg. £16/8/6; Grant and Sheriff (Walgett), 16 bullocks to £27/5/, avg. £23; T. IN THE SOLOMONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As a recruiter of native labourers in the Solomon Islands of a few years' standing I quite agree with Mr. J. H. Dickinson's statements in your issue of the 6th inst. If we recruiters took notice of the warnings posted up at the Government headquarters, Tulagi, there would be little or no recruiting done at all, and in the end no labour to work the plantations. Also the Government expects a white man to have an axe buried half way in his skull before he retaliates. On several occasions at the latter end of last year I was recruiting at Manogeer, on the island of San Christoval, and from what I could make out, the natives wanted to kill a white man in exchange for some natives who had died while away working on one of the Malayta Company's plantations (I believe with dysentery). "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth" is the motto, and as the recruiter is the only white man they come in contact with at these native places he generally bears the burden, even if they die 1000 miles from their island. As they waited months at Manogeer to get a white man—finding the recruiters calling there too wary to be caught napping—they must have walked over to Wanioni Bay and killed the late Mr. J. Laycock, who would not be prepared, as Wanioni Bay was not considered dangerous like Manogeer.

I am, etc., A. T. BINNIE.

MINING.

A QUIET DAY.

AWAITING DEVELOPMENTS.

BUSINESS AFFECTED.

The indecisive character of the war situation was solely responsible for the listless state of the Sydney Stock Exchange yesterday. Private cables from London stated that generally the home metal market was sound, especially as regards copper, tin, and lead. But this reassuring statement could not overcome the feeling of anxiety created by the doubt as to which way Bulgaria will go. "If one only knew," said a leading operator, "it would mean a good deal in the next few days."

It certainly would. Doubts on this point caused operators to be guarded. It would be a pure gamble to speculate upon the chance of Bulgaria casting in her lot with the Allies, or going with Germany, Austria, and Turkey. So they confined themselves to putting their books straight, or to a few minor transactions that could be covered up in a brief time. There was one broker, however, from whom the war situation had no terrors. As the king of the tin division, he offered to take delivery in one line in three months of 2000 Kampong Kamunting shares at 23/9 each, but he was not accommodated. Neither was any attempt made to form a combine of members to oblige the tin king.

In view of the stable character of the London metal market for tin, likewise the profitable nature of the operations of the British and Australian tin dredging plants in the Tarping Valley, without taking into account the soundness of the work being done by the Tongkah Harbour Tin Dredging Company at Puket, tin propositions in the East have been least affected by the depression that has overtaken the market. The plant of Parker's Tin Dredging Company at Tingha has, unfortunately, been hung up for some time for want of water, but has just been able to resume operations. The engine power of the plant is very good. It formerly belonged to the now defunct Tambaroora Gold Sluicing Company that came to an inglorious end a short distance from Hill End.

Whilst a slight weakness was apparent in Barriers, with copper stocks also showing a lack of vigour, scrip-holders were not disposed to be "panicky," however much they were anxious about the immediate developments of the European war situation.

MINING NOTES.

In the fortnight ended October 2 91ft of development work was carried out in the New Burragorang silver mine at Yerranderie. The machine drills were only partly engaged on development work. During the previous fortnight only one machine was developing. This accounts for the reduction in footage driven. The ore despatched to the smelters during the fortnight totalled 32½ tons.

At the annual general meeting of shareholders in the Iodide (Mineral Hill), Ltd., held on September 30, Mr. A. E. Savage was appointed a director of the company. At No. 3 level, No. 1 winze is now down 65ft, at which point water was cut, so sinking had to be discontinued. At No. 3 level, No. 1 drive was started on the south-east side of the plat, and is being extended along the footwall in lode formation. A chamber is being cut with a view to sinking a winze on the copper ore body passed through in the shaft at 260ft. The face is now in 7ft, showing native copper, also a little carbonate and black oxide of copper.

During the fortnight ended October 2, the plant at the Ovens Valley Gold Dredging Company treated 8,747 cubic yards of material, at a cost of 7.133 per cubic yard, and recovered 65oz of gold, valued at £260.

The latest report from the bore of the South Australian Oil Wells Company at Robe (S.A.), states: Heaving sands occur at intervals, and delay work, but progress is very fair. Indications, such as globules and scums of oil occur frequently, showing on the mud. Heavy winds and rain have delayed us at times. Depth now 1260 feet.

QUEENSLAND GOLD YIELD.

BRISBANE, Thursday.

During September, the gold yield decreased by 559 fine ounces, as compared with the yield for September of last year, the figures being 18,700 and 19,259 fine ounces respectively. The value of last month's production was £79,433.

TONGKAH HARBOUR TIN.

SEPTEMBER OUTPUT 108 TONS.

The under water operations of the Tongkah Harbour Tin Dredging Co. at Puket have this disadvantage, that the manager cannot see the ground he is treating. True, he has a chart giving a record of the bores put down in the bed of the harbour, but dredging operations have to be done blindly—that is to say, the manager has to judge by measurements if the buckets have got to the bottom of the tin-bearing Karang. In order not to miss any tin, a larger amount of material is lifted than otherwise would be the case if the work were on dry land.

A glance at the subjoined tabulated statement shows a marked variation in the tin content of the ground operated upon, but again this has to be considered by the light of the difficulty caused by under-water work. The last return to hand yesterday showed that in a run of 2867 hours during September the dredges handled 280,000 cubic yards of material, and recovered 108 tons of tin oxide. The number of hours worked and the quantity of material lifted are the biggest since last May, but the tin recovery is less. The following table gives the details for the past five months:—

	Hours Worked.	Cubic Yards Treated.	Yield Tons	Avg. p. yd.
May	2502	311,400	125	0.806lb
June	2295	280,500	107	0.856lb
July	2408	265,000	126	1.065lb
August	2364	254,000	117	1.031lb
September	2867	280,000	108	0.864lb

KALGOORLIE GOLD YIELD.

KALGOORLIE, Thursday.

The outputs for September were:—South Kalgurli, 9869 tons, £12,866 (expenditure, £10,107); Associated 10,353 tons, £10,534 (expenditure £11,561). A parcel of dollied gold brought in from Borland and Budd's Lease, Broad Arrow, was viewed by a large number of people to-day. It was the finest display seen in Kalgoorlie for many years, and recalled the rich finds of the early days of Coolgardie. When smelted, the bullion weighed 780oz, and it is valued at over £3000. The reef from which the gold was obtained is now five feet wide, and there are about 300 tons of ore in sight, in addition to 110 tons on the surface, which is estimated at three ounces per ton.

The Sydney Woolselling Brokers' Association reports:—A very strong market ruled for practically all descriptions of merino, with the exception of short, wasty, and very burry parcels, which are still neglected. Crossbreds were in keen demand at extreme figures, and bulky skirtings sold at prices equal to the best rates of the week.

The unassociated brokers report that the market ruled firm at late rates for all good and medium merinos. Short, burry, and shabby lines continue in poor demand. Fine crossbreds, free of burr, brought extreme prices, and could be quoted at the highest point of the season.

John Bridge and Co., Ltd., offered a catalogue largely comprised of wools showing the effects of the drought, many dusty backed and tender stapled parcels, and a fair proportion of burry wools being included, with a sprinkling of good useful merinos and crossbreds. In the grease the highest price was /15½, paid for 9 crossbred E of JCH/T (Tamworth), a dry wool of good quality, carrying an odd burr. AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

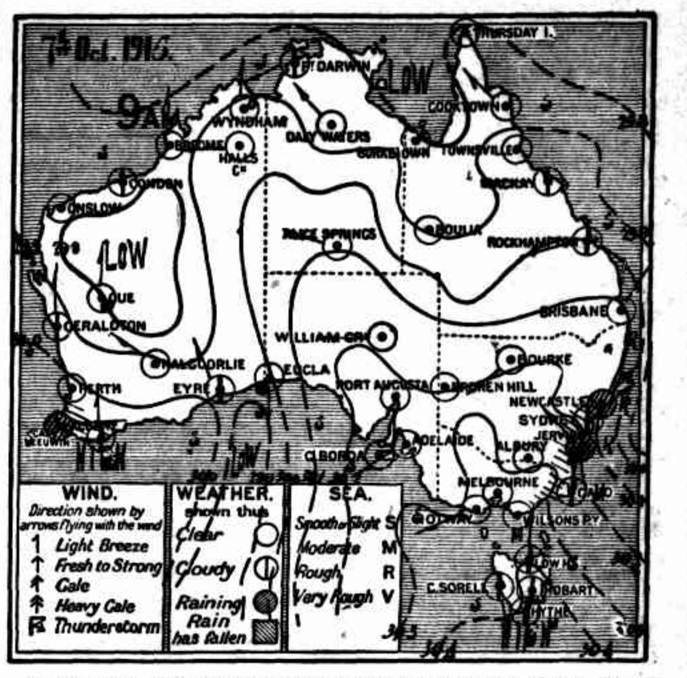
THE "HERALD" MAP.



The distribution of atmospheric pressure, as indicated on to-day's chart, is interesting, and illustrates the persistence of the north-east tropical disturbance, as it becomes established in the vicinity of our coast. The centre of energy is situated between Lord Howe Island and the seaboard. Since Wednesday this has worked slightly westward, and shows a little further intensification.

The great high pressure system, which is of a rough capital "U" shape, embraces, as it were, the disturbance, and has two main centres of energy, one to the south of Tasmania, and the other over the South Island of New Zealand. The former has lost in barometric value, whilst the latter has gained, and thus assisted in the intensification of the disturbance.

The indications are for more coastal rains, with squally and strong south-west to south-east winds, and rough seas, but as easting is made the conditions should moderate. Inland the weather should be fine, with milder temperature and north-east winds, but shortly becoming unsettled, as the Antarctic depression at present over the Central Bight works eastward.

Monsoonal activity is increasing over Western Australia, where the State is practically covered by a shallow depression, with a closed-curve centre. In the south-west corner of the continent is shown the "high," which was yesterday centred near Geraldton. This southward surge is favourable to rainy developments.

Ocean Forecast.—South-east gales south of a line joining the Hunter River and Wellington, New Zealand.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

The Australian Trotting Club holds a meeting on the Victoria Park track this afternoon, and an attractive bill of fare has been provided for lovers of that branch of sport. The track is excellent going, and horses of good class are engaged. Special trams land visitors at the racecourse gates, and the first race is timed to start at 2.30 p.m.

A. W. (Waverley): The starting price of Lucky Dip in the A.J.C. Breeders' Plate was 33 to 1.

In a bitterly cold and strong south-westerly gale yesterday morning Ulva's Isle, assisted by San Leandro, ran seven furlongs in 1m 32s on the Randwick middle grass track. The Mogul and Golden Ale also galloped seven furlongs, which occupied 1m 33½s; while Rue Victoria and Scoutmaster knocked off a mile in 1m 48s. Charleville and Pink and Blue completed a mile and a quarter in 2m 21s, and six furlongs in 1m 19½s were left astern by Vif and Quail. Kingsburgh was too good for Capillietti over a mile and a quarter, run in 2m 21s, and a mile in 1m 49s went down to Royal Rufus and Agincourt; while Uncle Sam and numerous others did serviceable tasks. Narivo was missing. He is in hospital with a badly injured hind leg, sustained in the Sydney Handicap on Wednesday.

Maltster's most brilliant daughter, Desert Rose, has produced a filly foal to Bronzino (imp.) and Mr. A. G. White's mare Braiding has foaled to the same sire. Lady Diffidence recently foaled twins (both dead) to Maltster, and Grey Mist (imp.)—dam of Mistico, a top class performer in Western Australia—has a colt foal by Mr. J. R. Hardie's Polymelus horse, Hochelaga.

VICTORIAN SPORTING NOTES.

CAULFIELD.

MELBOURNE, Thursday.

The weather was bright and frosty this morning, and the grass being in good order everything was in favour of making fast times. Klinger moved along at his ease for a mile in 1m 51s, and Crinoco travelled half that distance at his ease in 53½s. De Gama was kept well in hand for 5 furlongs in 1m 13½s. Pink Lady and Honorine dashed off four furlongs in 52⅖s, and Vibratory moved nicely for five furlongs in 1m 16½s. Patrobas, carrying W. Smart, went in his best style for six furlongs in 1m 18½s. Maori Mat and Wedge beat Tintometer over the last three furlongs of their gallop down the kennel course in 41s, and were pulling up the concluding furlong. Hassendene was going well over a mile, and Corstep also travelled the same journey in 1m 47½s; and Mintstone was 1m 46½s. Baverstock made his way over nine furlongs in 2m 4s. Defence, who keeps his condition well, ran seven furlongs in 1m 31s; and Euretta ran away from Linass over a mile in 1m 46s, both carrying very light weights. Silver Lady and Dumbarton, with colours up, went out of the starting gate, and did the last three furlongs in 39s, with the filly well in front. On the sand Front Lace went steadily, and Moscabar and Bonnydale were also let off with easy tasks. Londonderry was even-time for a mile and a quarter. Eishon occupied 1m 54s in running a mile, and Yeneda was 1m 51s for a like trip. Moonbarra stretched out for a mile, and El Bro ran six furlongs in 1m 19s. Avance was a second better than even-time for a mile. Trawl finished in front of Burlida at the end of six furlongs in 1m 17½s. Allansford and Gladwyn were not out to make time for their mile and a quarter in 2m 16s. Knight Silva put in an even-time gallop over four furlongs, and six-furlong gallops were done by Sparklight in 1m 19s, Andesine in 1m 18s, and Avonwort had the call of Orillis in 1m 18s. Star Pistol spurted four furlongs in 53s. Wallachia was not out to make a record for her mile, which she did in 1m 50s, and Coramina was responsible for a mile in 1m 51½s.

FLEMINGTON.

There was a particularly sharp white frost this morning, and it was very chilly until sunrise, after which it became bright and pleasant, and, with the big sand track in capital order, all the conditions were favourable for galloping. Lord Cecil led off by going a mile, and put on pace for the last half of it in 54½s. Naxberry (W. P. Burn), after going at about three-parts speed for five furlongs, quickened up a bit, and got over half a mile in 57½s. Dame Quickly (W. Minter) was going easily at the end of a mile, and was several lengths in front of Cherubini, who would seem to have gone off a bit. Royal Alice and King Kora (J. Killorn), who is a free going, even mover, were going very comfortably for half a mile in 57s. The Lintie (W. Minter) beat Prince Bardolph (E. Ettershank, a lightweight), by several lengths in a gallop of a mile and a quarter, in 2m 20s. They went off at score, running the first half mile in 52s, and six furlongs in 1m 20s, but tired greatly from that out. Bukowina and Vadrich spurted three furlongs in 40½s. Traquette (R. Leeming) started away very steadily in a gallop of a mile, but, improving the pace and keeping well out on the track, she did not seem to have any difficulty in running the concluding six furlongs in 1m 18½s. Marcellus and Wishing Cap did a working gallop over 11 furlongs in a little better than even time, and brushed up over the concluding couple of furlongs; while Ettefred and a companion strode over five furlongs at over even time speed. Wiltshire (J. Killorn) beat Dewy Dawn over half a mile in 52½s, and Sylvanmore was a little worse than even time for a mile. Miss Meadows was going better than Red Signal (J. Killorn) for the same distance in 1m 49½s. Bilberry was going very smartly in the early stages of six furlongs in 1m 20s, and Fidelio (J. Killorn) went a similar distance on the tan in 2s slower time. Golden Wire (G. Harrison) gave Milkabah a start and a beating in a gallop of a mile in 1m 49½s. Manaro (W. P. Burn) looked to be going easily while accompanying Santarem (E. Barker), and Kunegetis over half a mile in 53s. Mirantou did an even-time two furlongs. New comers in Flash of Steel and St. Spasa, who looked well off for seasoned condition, and to be none the worse for their trip from Sydney, were down for easy work. Great Shot went at rather better than even time speed. Milly Hilton (E. Barker) went about a mile and had the pace on for the last six furlongs in 1m 19½s, and beat Telves, who joined in for the last half-mile, done in 53s. Defyer and Cwenllian spurted three furlongs in 39s. One went at an even-time speed, and Twizel, Hoprig, and Condobolin spurted half a mile in 53s.

In the afternoon, when it was very bright and clear, and the track had been freshly harrowed, everything favoured fast time making. There was some interesting galloping by members of the string trained by J. Scobie, who had just returned from Randwick. The star performer was Cyklon (R. Lewis), who kept well out on the track, and ran three furlongs in 39s, five furlongs in 1m 5s, six furlongs in 1m 18s, seven furlongs in 1m 31s, a mile in 1m 44½s, and nine furlongs in 1m 58s; and, going on for another furlong, concluded a mile and a quarter in 2m 12½s. An excellent performance, and there can be no question as to his brilliancy. After going a furlong, Starland (P. Kelly) drew away from Deneb (R. Lewis), and beat her rather comfortably by three lengths over half a mile in 50½s. Two (R. Lewis) and Rosanna (L. Franklin) got very slow towards the end of a mile in 1m 50s; while Jaunt and Sneeze went the same distance, and ran the last six furlongs in 1m 23½s. Kildalton (R. Lewis), was going nicely for six furlongs on the tan, in 1m 19½s, the last half-mile being done in 53½s; and La Fidelle was going about three-parts speed. J. Lynch, who had also been away at Randwick, fully extended Pretty Bobby (a light boy), over a mile, which the colt completed in 1m 45½s.

SUPREME IN FOOD VALUE.

Not a mere luxury to be "nibbled between meals," but a body-building food that contains great nutritive value.

ARNOTT'S "SAO" BISCUITS

are health and strength giving products. Their pure quality and delightful flavour are pleasing to the palate—their crisp daintiness is enhanced when butter is added. For all occasions when wholesome, nourishing food is desirable "Saos" are appetising and enjoyable. More important still—they have a greater nutritive value than some of the more expensive foodstuffs. For Summer meals they will prove light, dainty, and refreshing. Get a tin from your Grocer to-day.

"ALL THOSE IN FAVOUR—SA-O."

EXTRACTION HURT? NEVER!

Ask any "DENTIST PHILLIP MOSES" patient whether he felt the least pain during an extraction. His reply will be convincing. But there is another assurance of perfect painlessness. I undertake to forfeit £5 to anyone who is conscious of the slightest twinge of pain during an extraction. MY SPECIAL METHOD OF PAINLESS EXTRACTION gets rid of the preliminary pain and unpleasantness of other systems. There is no painful pricking to fear. And you will not suffer afterwards from SWOLLEN GUMS, or have broken stumps remaining in the jaws. The method is suitable for all persons—from the youngest to the oldest. Those with weak hearts suffer no inconvenience from my treatment. I can drill and fill the most sensitive tooth entirely without pain. I possess an apparatus—the only one in Sydney—which enables me to achieve this splendid result. I guarantee, in writing, all fillings and plate work for 5 years. It is so rarely that a mishap occurs, I can quite easily afford to remedy it. I will examine your mouth and give you an estimate of cost free of charge.

As a matter of fact there would be no flies to fight within the four walls of your domicile if its doors and windows had been rendered flyproof with NOCK AND KIRBY'S FLYPROOF SCREEN WIRE DOORS AND WINDOWS.

But as there's no sense in crying over spilt milk, now the flies are in FIGHT THEM, exterminate them, and keep the dirty, disease germ carriers off the food you've got to eat, by means like these, at

BE ATTRACTIVE.

A pretty face never fails to win admiration. You can have a complexion as soft and pretty as your most beautiful friend if you will use Volna Skin Food for a week or two. Volna is full of nature's own beautifier—oxygen. It is this oxygen which makes Volna so different and superior to the ordinary face cream. This oxygen is a real food for the skin and the cells and tissues underneath. It gives you a healthy, clear, young complexion, because it fills out the hollow places, the lines, and the wrinkles. It dissolves the dead skin which lies on the surface of a sallow face, and leaves the fresh young skin to be seen by all. It banishes freckles, blackheads, and open pores. It keeps the complexion soft and cool in the hottest day. Now that summer is here, start using Volna. You can get a jar for 1/9 at Dean's Drug Store, 13 Liverpool-street, Sydney (nearly opposite Nat Lewis'), or any other chemists. You can receive it by post in plain wrapper by sending 2/ in stamps, or postal note, to the Volna Depot, 81 Elizabeth street, Sydney.

WRITE FOR FREE BOOKLET,

—entitled "A Beautiful Complexion for Every Woman." It gives all the secrets of a perfect appearance. It tells how to improve the hair, and how to get rid of dandruff; how to manicure the nails, how to get rid of double chin and face blotches, how to massage the face properly, how to prepare for company, the theatre, and so on. There is no charge for this book. Just send 2d in stamps (to cover postage, etc.), to the Volna Depot, and a copy will be sent you in plain wrapper.
